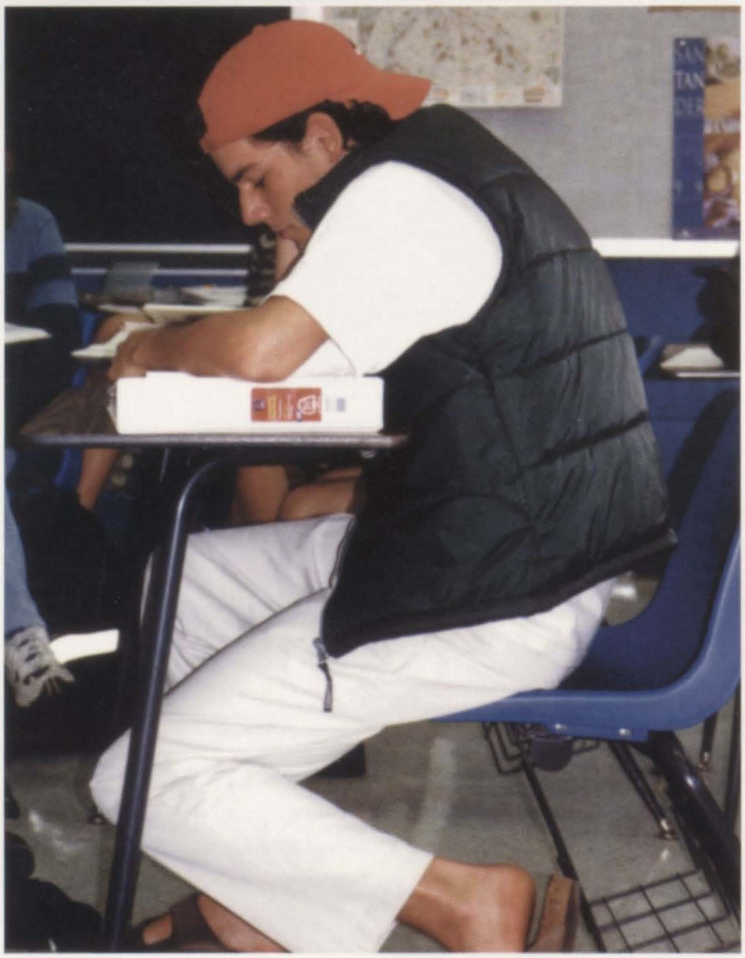
TO BE...

Above: These members of the Varsity Cheerleading Squad hold hands while they wait for the star spangled banner to end. Guess how many times these girls hear that song every sports season...



Right: Senior Brad Frost sits engrossed in his studies, reviewing for one of Mrs. Brunet's killer verb tests. What do all of those conjugations do, anyway?

Nineteen ninety-nine. The last year of the millenium. Everyone hoped this year would be one of the greatest ever, and it didn't disappoint. Mason students were faced with many new challenges, including new teachers, an entirely new sports' district, and the daunting idea of more new technology to stumble over. However, Mason was once again chosen as "the most challenging school" according to the Washington Post, and not much changed in the way of academics. The classes, however, shared fierce rivalries (especially that of the seniors and juniors) and this year's homecoming pep rally, according to Mr. Snee, was "one of the best" he'd seen in years. The class of 2000, outside their academic excellence (which was the most advanced the school has seen in recent years) excelled in sports and other disciplines as well. The juniors proved themselves a class to be reckoned with, and the freshmen and sophomores proved that they're only just beginning. The year went off without a hitch (Excepting the slow completion of the barren wasteland that was once playing fields and the rarity of parking permits) and was a model one for George Mason. For Mason students, the question "to be or not to be" was never a question. They would not only be, but be the best.

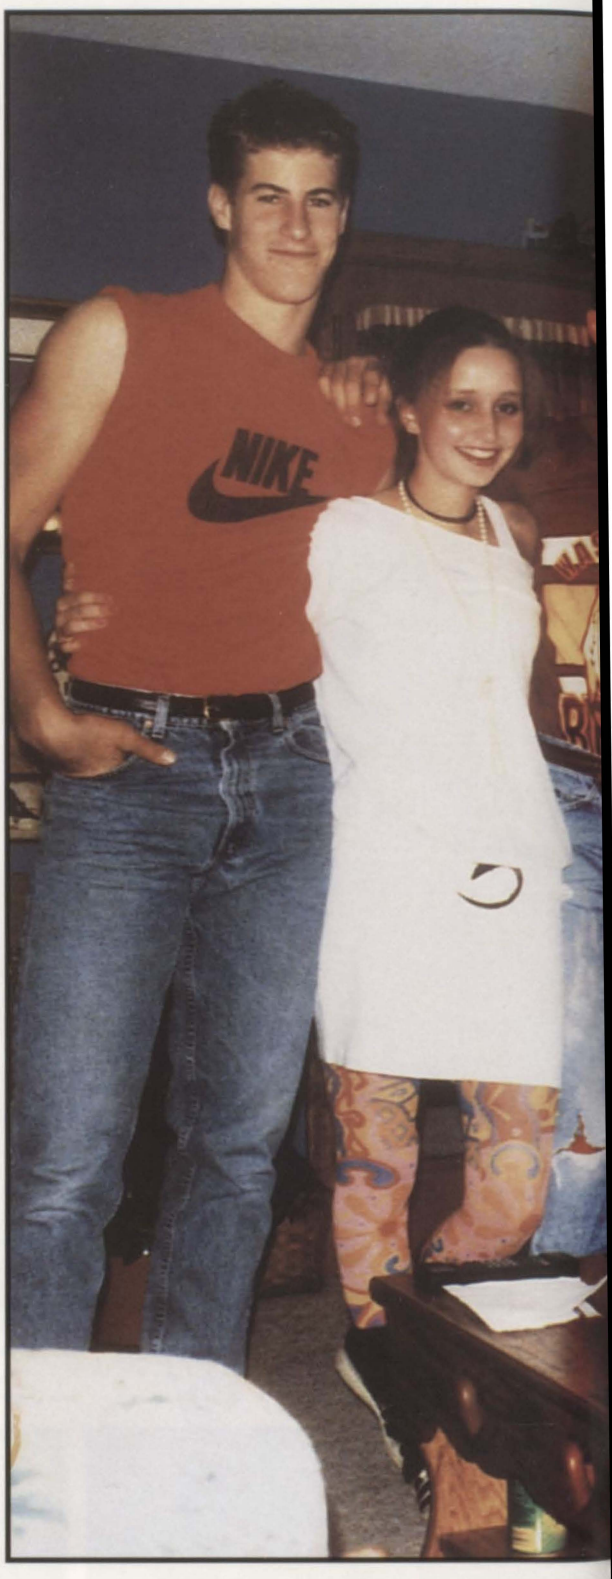
Student Life means all that stuff students do when they aren't scratching their eyes out studying. Mason students somehow manage to use every minute of free time to their advantage. Seniors seem to do nothing but relax in the alcoves, juniors congregate in classrooms, sophomores take the corners, and freshmen prefer the hallway (and effectively block it.) This free time is the only way students can retain their sanity. Those of us who decide sitting around isn't enough can participate in drama, go to sports events, or even (gasp!) go to work. With such full schedules, such things may seem impossible, but Mason students find a way to be versatile, (otherwise known as overloaded.) Students at this school know how to get down to business and work for grades, but they also know how to have fun. Dances, club events, car washes, and class organized events such as the winter formal, Mr. Mason, and even homecoming are put on by students with extremely high workloads. Hanging out and goofing off have their own time too, and we have to admit that sometimes, that time is class. But don't worry teachers, we need it, so cut us some slack.



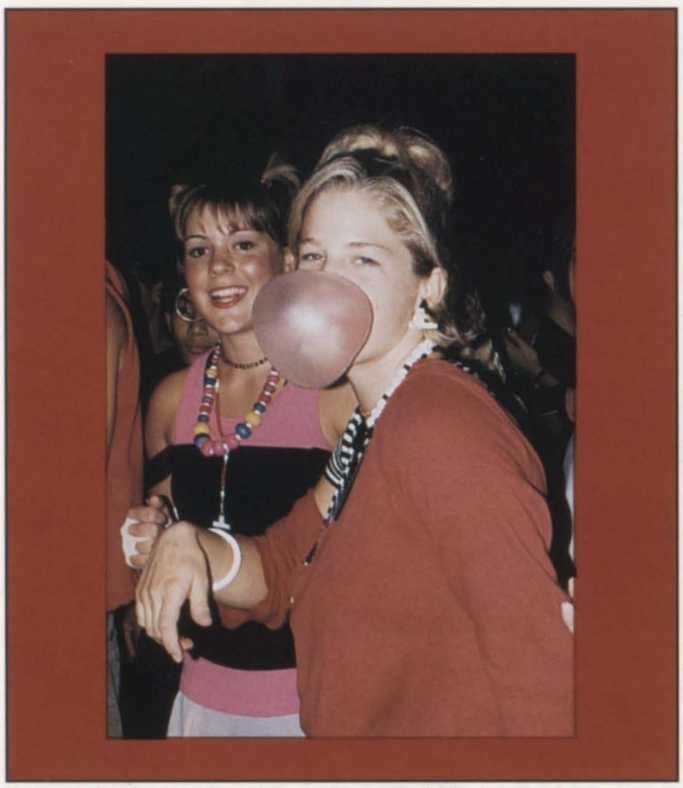
Just be outgoing...

Student Life

School Spirit

Just Be Proud

Mason is full of spirited kids that will jump on any and all opportunities to show it. Whether it means a theme dance, pep rally, or any sports event (whether or not it's at "home") they're always there and ready to scream, yell and talk trash until they're hoarse. Not only have Mason students painted themselves, but they've unabashedly gone to other schools, desecrated their mascots, and proved that ours is the best little school around. Even though we had not a single home football game this year, students were always there to face the freezing cold and cheer their boys on. There is a huge feeling of pride that runs in everyone's veins after we proved ourselves a district sports power in 1998-1999. As for dances and other school events, there is never a shortage of willing students. At the Grounds Party this year, many students turned out to paint and eat hot dogs, and the final product was absolutely gorgeous. This is only one of the ways that Mustang Pride has left an indelible mark on the school. This year's student body was no different and set spirit record after record.



Junior Elizabeth Falkey blows a huge bubble that is about to pop and cover her nose while Kari Lewis tries to get into the action.

Mysteriously, the Village People made a surprise appearance at our Eighties Dance. Thomas Bracken as the sailor, Nish Mehra as the construction worker, Michael Degnan as the grunge biker, Michael Bracken as the (naked) indian, and Brad Frost as the no-name village person. Everyone appreciated their antics, especially the striptease that came later....

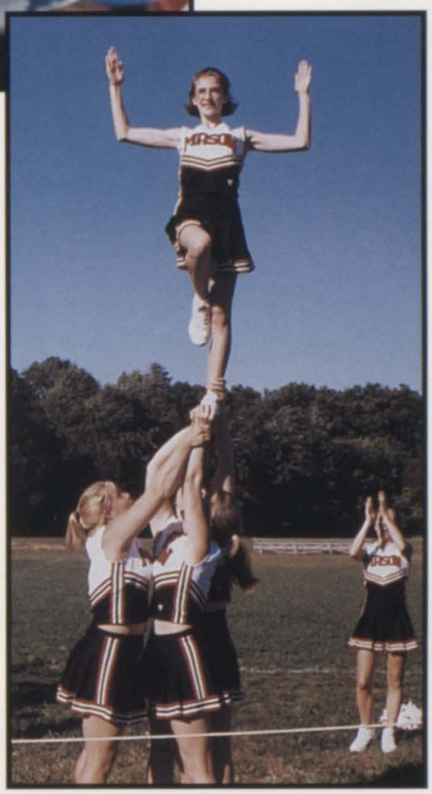
Junior Betsy Andres is way too excited about cutting out this barstool for the 2001 Saloon.

The Junior class hall decorators get spirited after finally finishing their work of art.

Mason students work hard at the wall outside the middle school, painting five mustangs in a tile-mosaic design.

Sophomore Megan Watts stands comfortably in a "liberty" and lets the crowd know that the football team has scored yet another touchdown.



Junior Talin Yergatian gets some red paint to finish her tail -- of a mustang that is.

School Rivalries

"The rivalry between the Manassas Park and Mason softball teams is legendary. Their pitcher is a she-male, they have an outfielder named 'Ape' (short for April...yeah right...) and they always beat us. Except this year, right girls?"

-Sally Prendergast

"It was weird having a teammate from Brentsville (Ethan), but he turned out to be a cool guy even though we thought he would be a backwoods trailer type. But he's a really good football player and that helped out a lot this year."

-Ben Love

Juniors Talin Yergatian and Jessica Peters work on a poster for their theme of the "wild wild west." The juniors' hall ended up coming in one point behind the seniors, showing the rivalry between classes.

Senior Erin Adkins sports twenties garb on the freshmen theme day, one of the best turn-outs of the week.

Even though he's wounded, Junior James Slaton still dressed up to support his class on Greco-Roman day.

SPIRIT WEEK

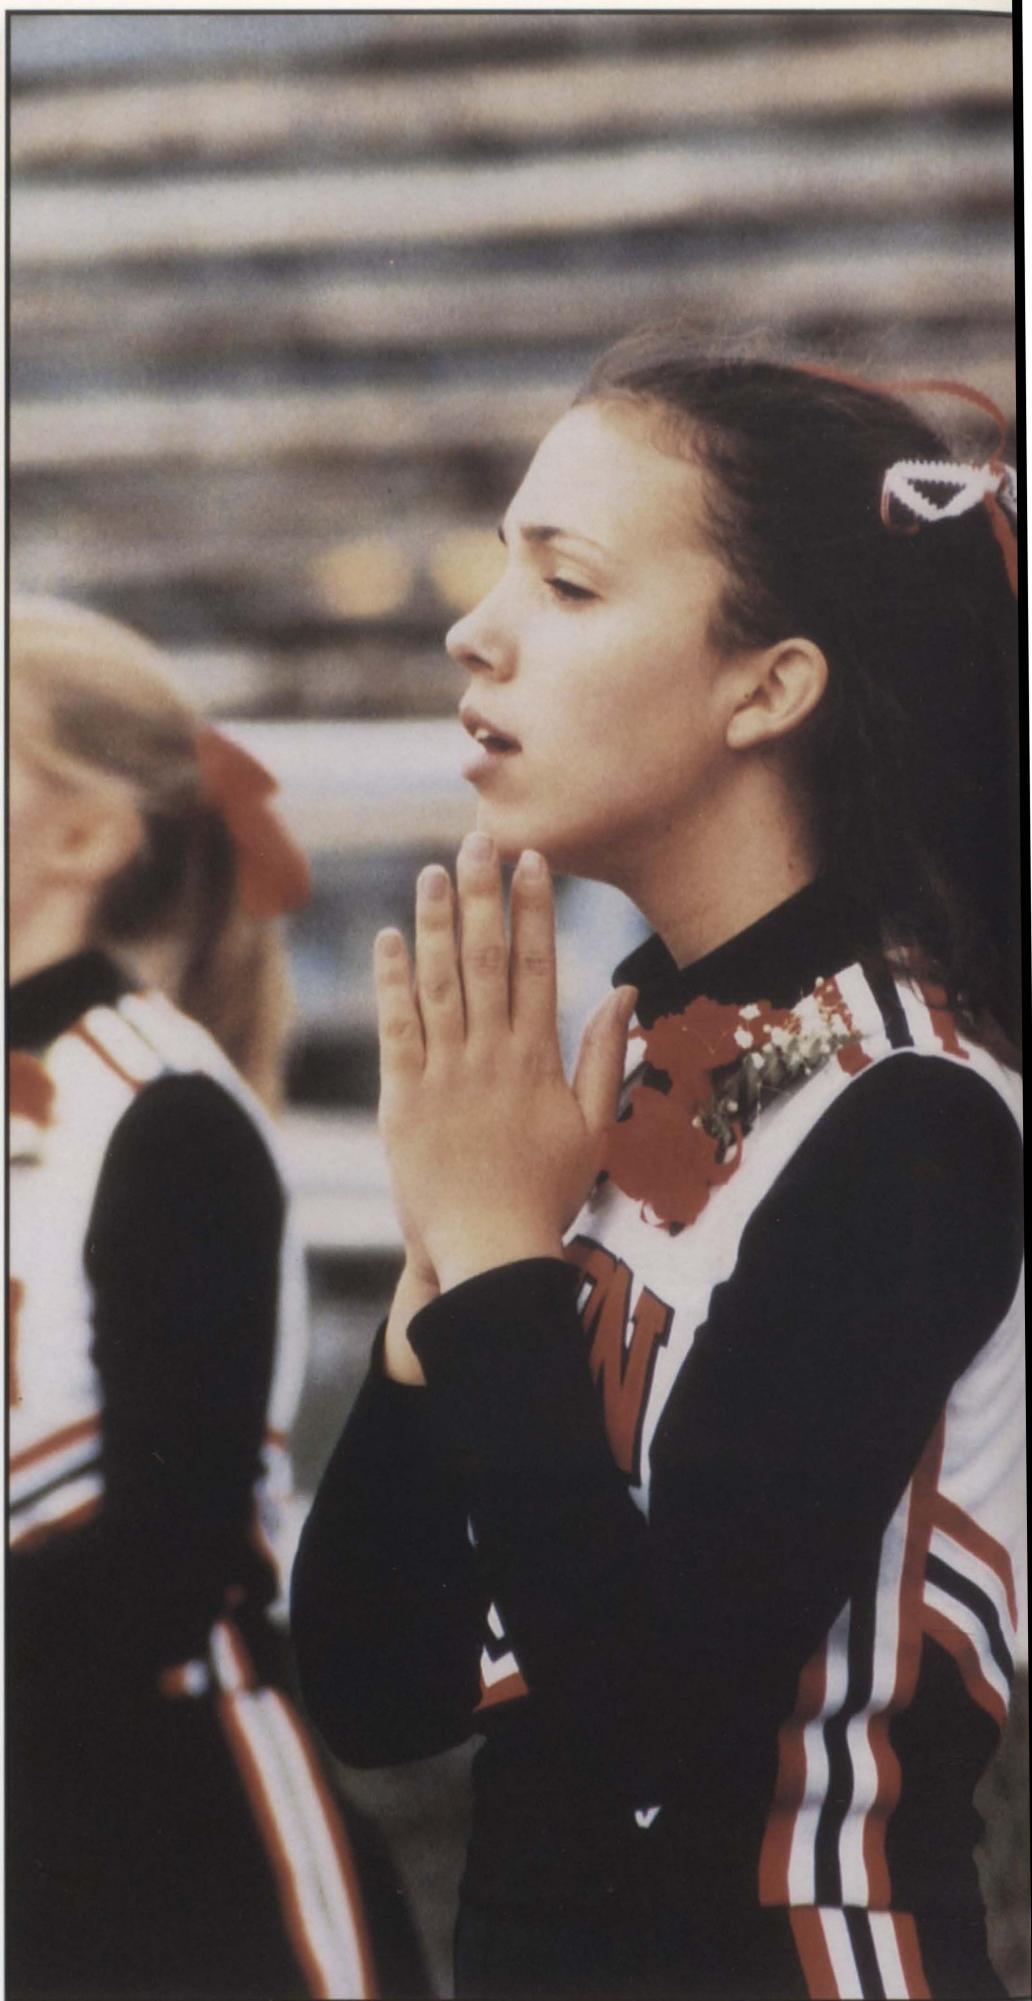
Only one word can adequately describe this year's spirit week: close. Not only were the seniors and juniors tied on Friday, but there was a tight race between the sophomores and freshmen as well. The week started off with a bang on Red and White Day (on Monday rather than Friday this year) and the number of students decked out was higher than usual. The trend continued through Twenties Day (when students wore flapper outfits, beads, and headbands) and Pirate Day, when many were seen with parrots on their shoulders, patches over their eyes, or swords in their pockets (much to the chagrin of the administration.) As the threat of the junior grew and the seniors grew more anxious, the day of the powder puff game arrived. One of the muddiest, most violent, most confusing games in history ensued. It ended up a tie, though there seemed to be a clear winner. The girls ended up dirty and soaking wet, but in good humor. However, the competition was far from over. With two days and a lot more contests to be decided, the classes were ready for some good old-fashioned trash talking. Thursday was the Junior's Wild Wild West Day, and they showed their spirit with almost half of their grade in cowboy hats, bandanas, and plaid flannel. The competition became even tighter. With the addition of the canned food drive as a competition, the seniors and juniors scrambled to get as many cans as possible and by Friday the boxes were packed to overflowing. Friday was Toga Day and the students tried to take the naked-under-this-toga joke as far as possible, and the open-minded seniors swept the day, making the score even. This week set the stage for one of the most exciting pep rallies in history, where the margin of victory was incredibly small and the cheering never stopped.

JUST BE... ENTHUSIASTIC

Left: Freshman Christina Sedney applies fringe to her class' flapper skirt, helping decorate the hallway in twenties' style. In spite of her effort, the freshmen still came in last. Sorry, freshmen.

Above: A toga party ensues in Mr. Applegate's room after these ladies receive their bunches of carnations.

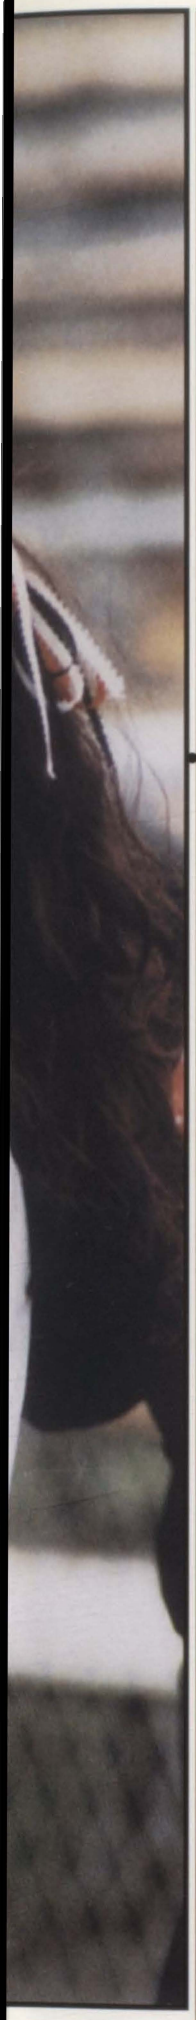
Senior Ethan Crouch picks up a first down while this Eagle linebacker tries and fails to catch him.



Junior vs. Senior

"The outcome had nothing to do with the most spirited because everyone knows that the juniors went for it all week, and the seniors didn't start until Wednesday when they got scared. Just wait until next year..."
~Junior Becky Davis

"I think it was really unfair that an alleged senior came in and blew the tug-of-war for us. There definitely should've been a rematch, but the juniors knew that they would've gotten killed."
~Senior Krista Locklar



Pep Rally Results:

1st Place: Class of 2000
2nd Place: Class of 2001
3rd Place: Class of 2002
4th Place: Class of 2003

Senior Kerry Kuhn grimaces as she pulls as hard as she can. Even though they (technically) won, the seniors' victory was voided by "interference."

Sophomore Jessie Grubbs sits comfortably on the frozen, muddy, slippery field and still manages to smile even though it's forty degrees outside and she's forced to wear that uniform.

The members of the senior court shiver and try to look pretty. The court is (from left to right) Catarina Andrade and Nish Mehra, Layton Walker and Tim Gardina, Laura Blodgett and Dave Frost, Dinah Lord and Bolaji Ojumu, Lauren Szymanski and Owen Durham, and Jenny Powell and Jordan Wilson.

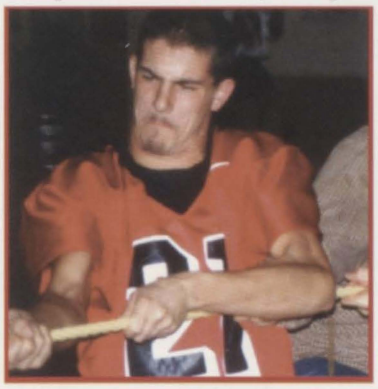
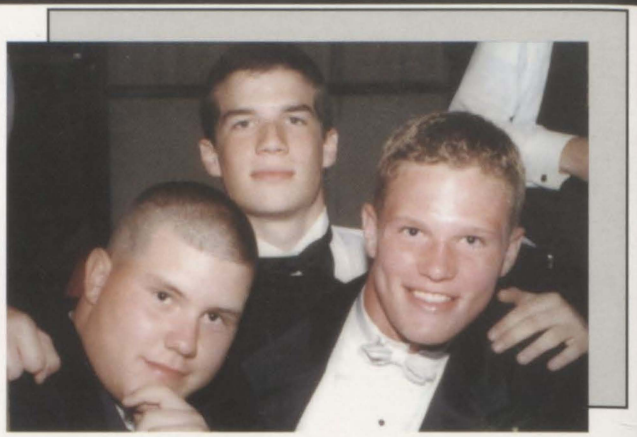
HOMECOMING 99

Just be Victorious

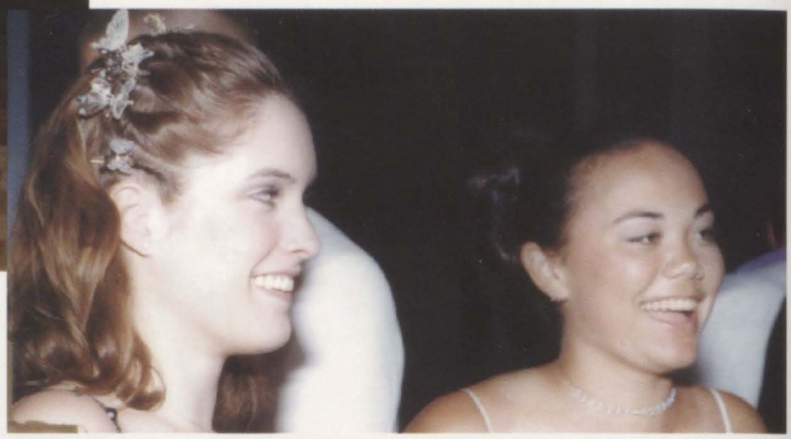
Homecoming. Coming home. Even though this wasn't the case, the football team still beat the crap out of Clarke County on a chilly Saturday at George Marshall High School. The game was a fitting culmination of the week's events, as the students forgot about the divisions between them and got together to cheer the boys on. The homecoming pep rally was the most spirited in years and almost ended with an upsetting of the seniors. The classes participated in the traditional games of dress-up/dress-down, the joust, pie-eating, arm wrestling, shout-off, and tug-of-war. Though most of the competition, the juniors and seniors swept there were a few surprise victories from freshmen and sophomores. The tug-of-war proved the most controversial of the night, with the juniors taking the victory after interference by a certain senior (we won't name names.) The pie-eating and arm wrestling were taken by the juniors while the seniors won the dress-up/dress-down, and the joust. The scores were so close after the conclusion of these contests, however, that the winner would be decided by the shout-off. Probably the most subjective of the contests, it was decided by teachers with their backs turned, and after three or four rounds, the seniors were given the win. They ended up taking the victory by a mere fifty points, a comparatively tiny margin. The sophomores came in a narrow third after beating the freshman by only 75 points. The football game turned out to be not much of a competition, with the guys crushing the Eagles of Clarke County 36-0, during which senior running back Ben Love broke 1,000 yards rushing for the season. Friday's and Saturday's events proved a great success and left everyone wishing it had gone on longer. The seniors and juniors, however, were ready for some rest.



The crowd surrounds the dance floor, watching in admiration, as Meredith Griffiths and KC Atabaki show us what it's all about!



Seniors Jamie Levitt, Daniel Hardman, and Junior Michael O'Connor take a breath from dancing to pose for the camera, don't you notice that these guys have the same facial expression in every picture they take.



Krysten Rose-McCully, looking like an ethereal butterfly princess, wonders what a gleefully amused Amy Hobbie is laughing at...perhaps the sight of someone's dress tucked up into her underwear!

Drum roll please... Presenting the 1999 Prom King and Queen, Jeff Daube and Summer Harrington! The anticipation of the crowning was great, the crowd "oohed" and "aahed" while the Prom Court made their majestic entrance. Principal Snee prepared to announce this year's King and Queen while the crowd held their breath. First, Mr. Snee called out the name of the Prom King. The crowd applauded enthusiastically while Mr. Snee presented Jeff with the royal scepter. Then came the heightened moment as the Prom Queen was announced and a radiant Summer took her rightful place beside Jeff, roses in hand and the tiara on her head.

PROM COURT 1999

Just be Gorgeous...

GMHS PROM 1999

Upon entering The DoubleTree, you were swept into a different world. Black columns graced the entrance way and acres of helium balloons in purple, black and silver surrounded the crowded dance floor. The theme was "Galaxy Nights," a mixture of romantic evening notions and mysterious outer space. The major hits of the night were the glow sticks handed out at the door which lit up the room with an otherwordly glow. The dance floor was overflowing all evening with happy couples and swingin' singles. The DJ was excellent, remembering of course to play the theme song, "At the End of the Road." Everyone had a blast and many said it was the best prom ever seen at GM. Prom 1999 was a dazzling success!

This group of rowdy freshmen converse while pretending not to pose for the camera. As for their opinion of their first homecoming, the consensus was a good one.

Sisters Megan and Amanda Watts share a dance.

Seniors Brad Frost and Amy Hobbie rush into the cafeteria, making a dramatic entrance.

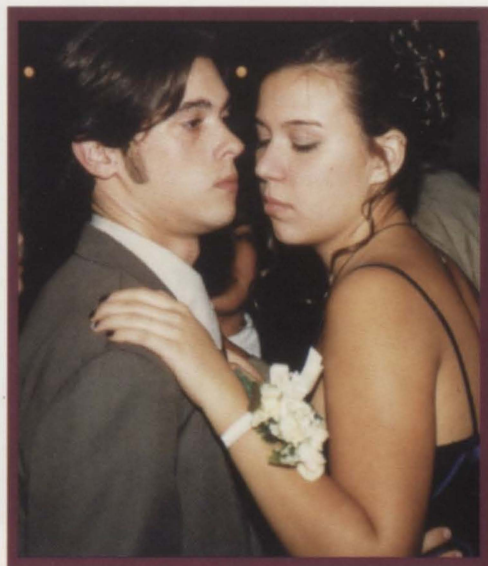
Homecoming King and Queen Jenny Powell and Bolaji Ojumu parade down the aisle and through the columns to greet their court. Jenny and Bolaji were chosen out of six girls and six boys that were nominated by the senior class. Both are members of several clubs as well as outstanding students.

Junior Amanda Henneberg relaxes and starts to doze off on her date Nathan Hamme's shoulder during the spotlight dance.

Just be ravishing...

Greco-Roman Festival

The seniors this year put on an amazing homecoming with a great DJ, beautiful decorations, and wonderful ambience, including Greek columns, famous Grecian works of art on a slide projector, and a huge amount of olive branches. The decor (brought to all of us by the hard work of Senior Beth Gardner, among oth- ers,) stood true to it's theme and allowed a wonderful time for all. The DJ was excellent, and as the dance was finishing he informed the class of 2000 that not only was he DJing their senior home- coming, but he had also done the same for their sixth grade end- of-the-year dance. With great food, as well, the night was complete. However, students faced a new problem when all of the students barely fit into the cafeteria, packing in like sar- dines and not being able to see when the homecoming court was announced. This year's homecoming King and Queen, Jenny Powell and Bolaji Ojumu, were presented with roses and a crown of olive branches, making a beautiful pair. The evening provided a great ending to the week, after the victory of the football team and the great efforts put forth by all classes. The senior class did an incredible job this year, and many students were heard to say that it was the best they'd ever attended.



Junior Cassi Varouxis glances down to make sure her corsage is still on and misses senior Brendan Reels' attempt to look deeply into her eyes.

"Oh my god, what is that girl wearing?!?" exclaims junior Ashley Jordan, while fellow junior Kari Lewis looks on in disapproval.

EXPRESSIONS

JV SHOW 2000

Mad props to the Junior class, because this year's JV Show was awesome. With wonderful dancing, great singers, and a brilliant showcase of talent and grace in performance, the show evoked emotions of all kinds. This year's Emcee, Mr. David Frost, did a great job of announcing the acts that really didn't need announcing. Highlighted by a heartfelt and dynamic performance by stage veteran Nish Mehra and four amazing dances, the show was well-rounded and included not only a skit (something that we thought was extinct) but a guitar solo, an interpretive dance, and some amazing a cappella pieces. The experience began when the audience, once seated, was treated to a trippy light show while dancers, dressed in black, helped introduce the theme of expressions. The show was impressive, and judging by the number of people there the night I went, we're going to have an unbelievable prom. Good Work, 2001.

Junior Clare McNamara sings a heartfelt ballad and entrances the audience.

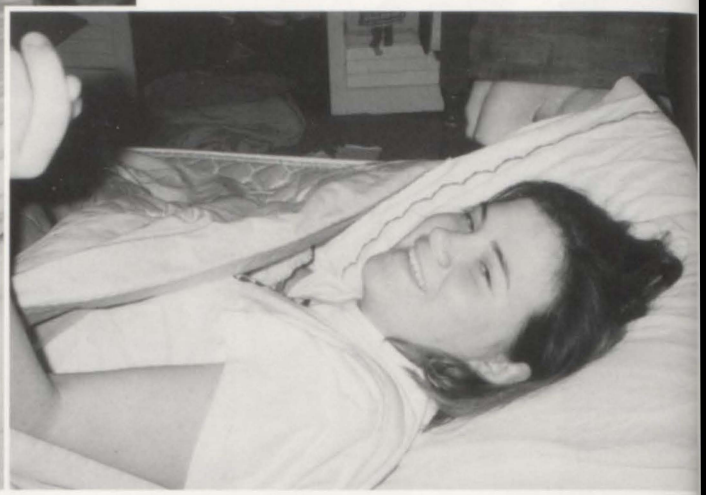
Rise and shine!

6:30am: Two yearbook staff members showed up at Junior Liz Gannon's door and knocked lightly. Mrs. Gannon answered the door with a smile and we proceeded to ask if Liz was awake yet. "Well, no she's not, I'm sorry." "Perfect," we replied with evil grins, and quickly but quietly charged upstairs, camera in hand.



6:32am: Well, we thought it was a good time to wake her up, but Junior Liz Gannon greeted us with a classic Falls Church "YOU JERKS!" (insert Mason accent here) Once the shock of waking up to two yearbook staff members with a camera faded, Liz put on a smile and laughed off the traumatic event. If anyone ever wonders why we are on the yearbook staff, incidents like these should be a big clue. We don't want anyone barging into our rooms in the wee hours of the morning! By the way, we like your teddy-bear.

Sally Prendergast could be described as the quintessential anti-morning person. When deciding how to approach the somewhat hostile envoronment of her crap-covered room, it was decided that I, her sister, would be the safest navigator. I woke up, threw on a bathrobe, and tiptoed to her room, knowing I'd have to get it over with fast. Throwing open the door I switched on the light and found her momentarily motionless. After screaming her name at the top of lungs a few times, she finally stirred. When she noticed the camera, her only response was, "Why are you doing this?" And so, here they are, a series of pictures for which I risked life and limb, simply to show the world how hostile my sister really is in the morning. ••••••••••••••••••

6:37am: We busted into Junior Robin Miller's basement Mission Impossible style. "Time to get up!" we announced. "Go away," he replied, covering his face. So we did, but not before taking this beautiful picture!

What's the strangest dream you've ever had?

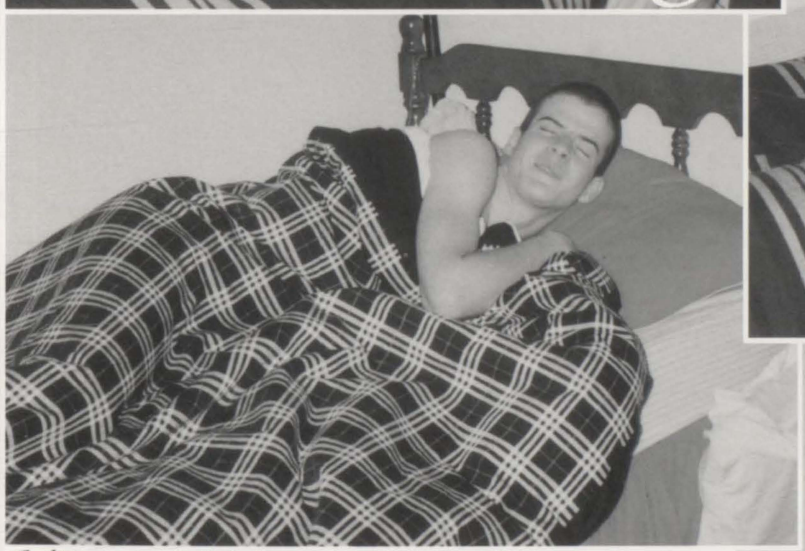
"I married Nathan Hamme and we had a blonde 4-year-old daughter who turned into an 18-year-old black male over night."
-Junior Mary Prendergast

"I became a spider and my brother stepped on me"
- Freshman Aysha Twose

"I thought I could fly so I leapt off a roof and broke my foot. Oh wait, that really happened."
-Sophomore Leen Quintyn

Rude Awakening...

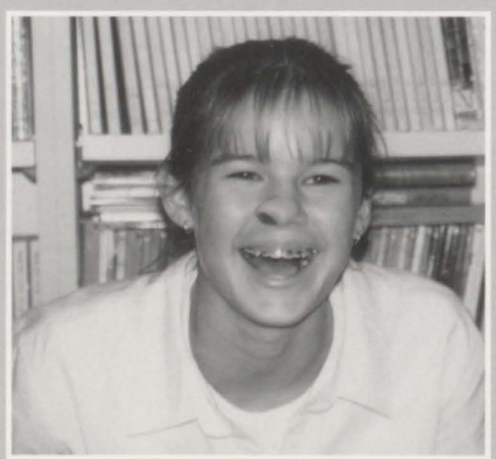
6:45am: The covert operation continued on to the Bracken household where we found Michael in a cheery mood. "Good morning, ladies," he greeted us, and rolled over to begin a conversation. Glad someone was a morning person after the other events of the day! He even ventured a wide-eyed smile, and even though it didn't come out that way, thanks for the effort! And now across the hall to Thomas's room...



6:47am: A slightly less warm welcome from this Bracken... The thoroughly surprised Thomas squinted and demanded to know what time it was. "Oh my God, it's so early!" he exclaimed, then realizing that we were going to take another picture, he too attempted a grin before falling fast asleep once again. We apologize for disturbing your peaceful slumber, but come on, school starts in less than an hour! We also thank you for remaining covered up after a startling realization about your sleeping habits...

...NOSE PICKING. Senior Ben Love blatantly fishes during world history. We knew he was good at trout fishing, but geez...

...INSERTING A QUARTER INTO ONE'S NOSE. Sophomore Jessica Szymanski...well, shoves a quarter up her nose. Thanks for the image, Jessica.



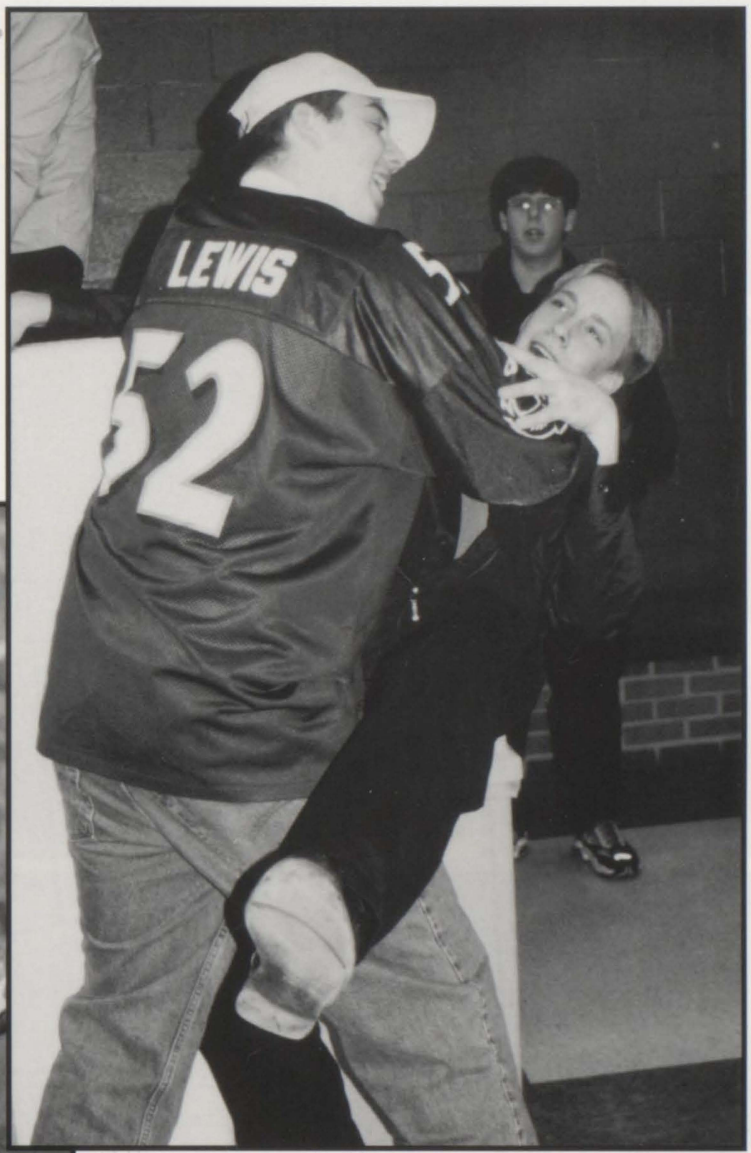
...PICKING YOUR TEETH. Sorry we had to do this to you Meagan, but it just fit so perfectly, and you know everyone does it, just not in the yearbook...

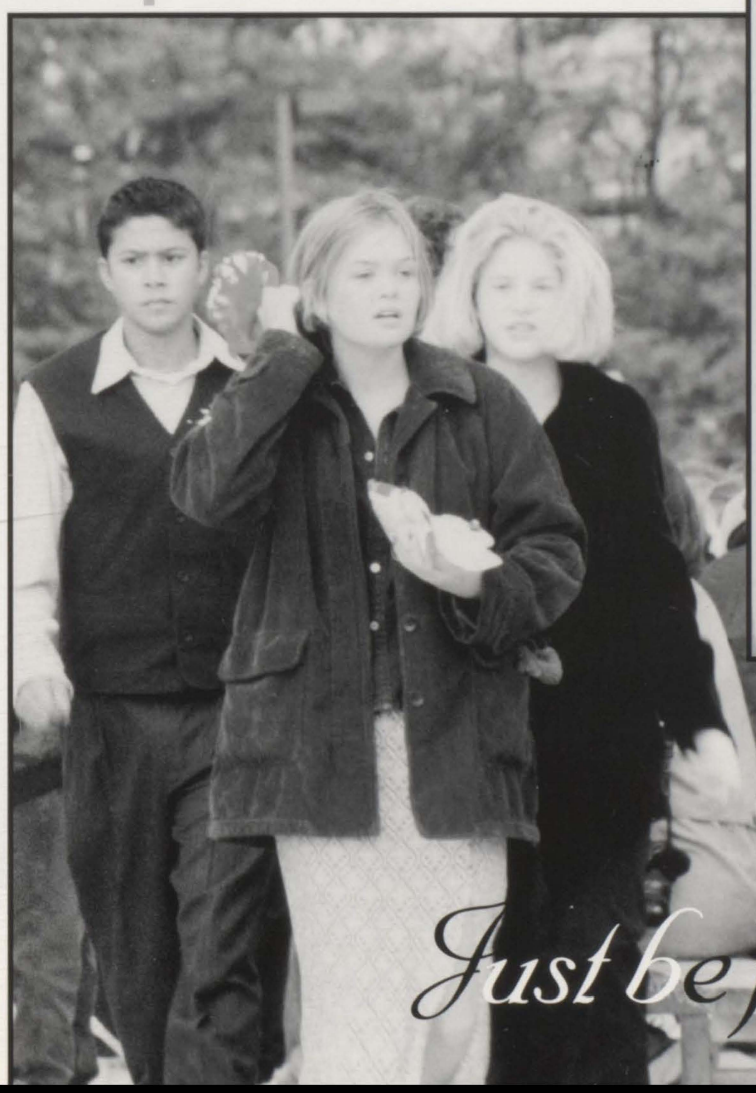
All we can say is, why? Wait...don't answer that...

CAUGHT IN THE ACT OF...

This page needs no explanation. This is the one about which everyone gets angry now but will laugh hysterically at in ten years. Or at least that's how victims get over the horrible pain and embarassment they go through life. The yearbook is not responsible for medical expenses, etc. Read at your own risk.

...REARWATCHING. Senior Jessica Taylor gets a good look at Ethan Crouch's hind quarter (and don't think he isn't loving it.)
...ASSAULT. Junior Chris Geurtsen prepares to strangle Nathan Hamme in an attempt to glorify his fallen comrade, Baltimore Ravens player Ray Lewis. "He is NOT the kind of role model we envisioned for Chris" comment his parents...





...STALKING. Well, maybe Junior Elizabeth Falkey, Senior Laura Blodgett, and Senior Nish Mehra aren't stalking anyone, but we'd like to think they could if they were so inclined. And besides, they look like they're on a mission.

Just be perverse...

Things To Do With Inedible Cafeteria Food

10. Play catch.
9. Build little boats and submarines out of pizza pockets and green beans.
8. Cover it in ketchup -- you won t taste it.
7. Donate it for scientific research so we can figure out what the he it actually is..
6. Go on strike.
5. Use your stryofoam tray as a hat and walk around shaking people s hands, saying, Call me Admiral.
4. Stage a play starring Gilligan Green Bean.
3. Complain to the cafeteria food gods by spitting and cursing.
2. Search for little multicolored spots and nutrients.
1. Eat it.

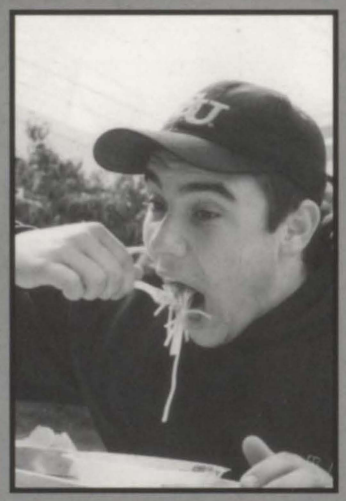
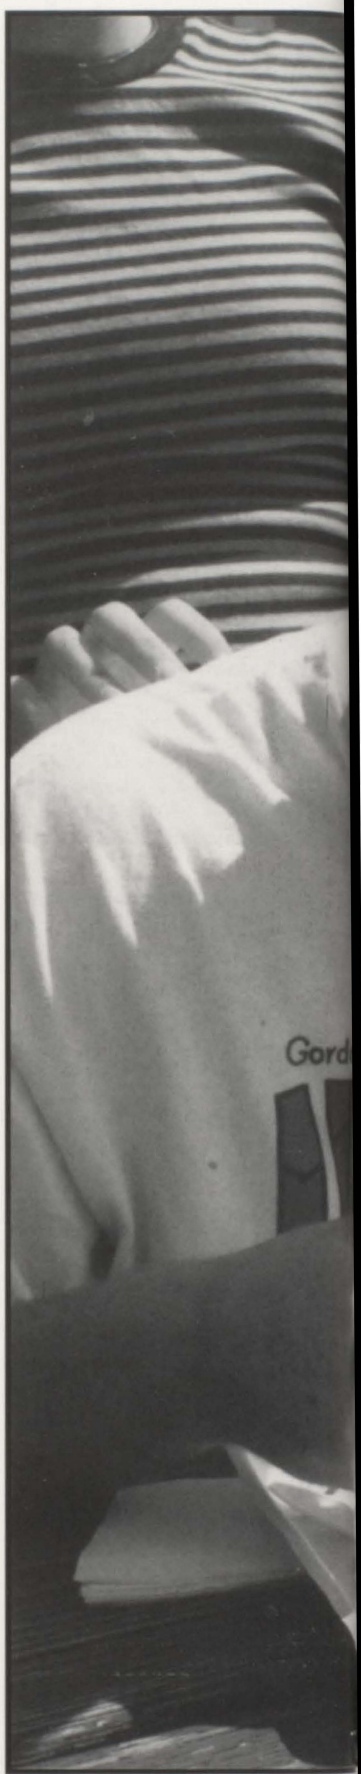
Juniors Liz Wanlund, Lies Quintyn, and Clare McNamara eat in the coveted (well, not really) junior alcove and study for everyone'(least) favorite subject, biology.

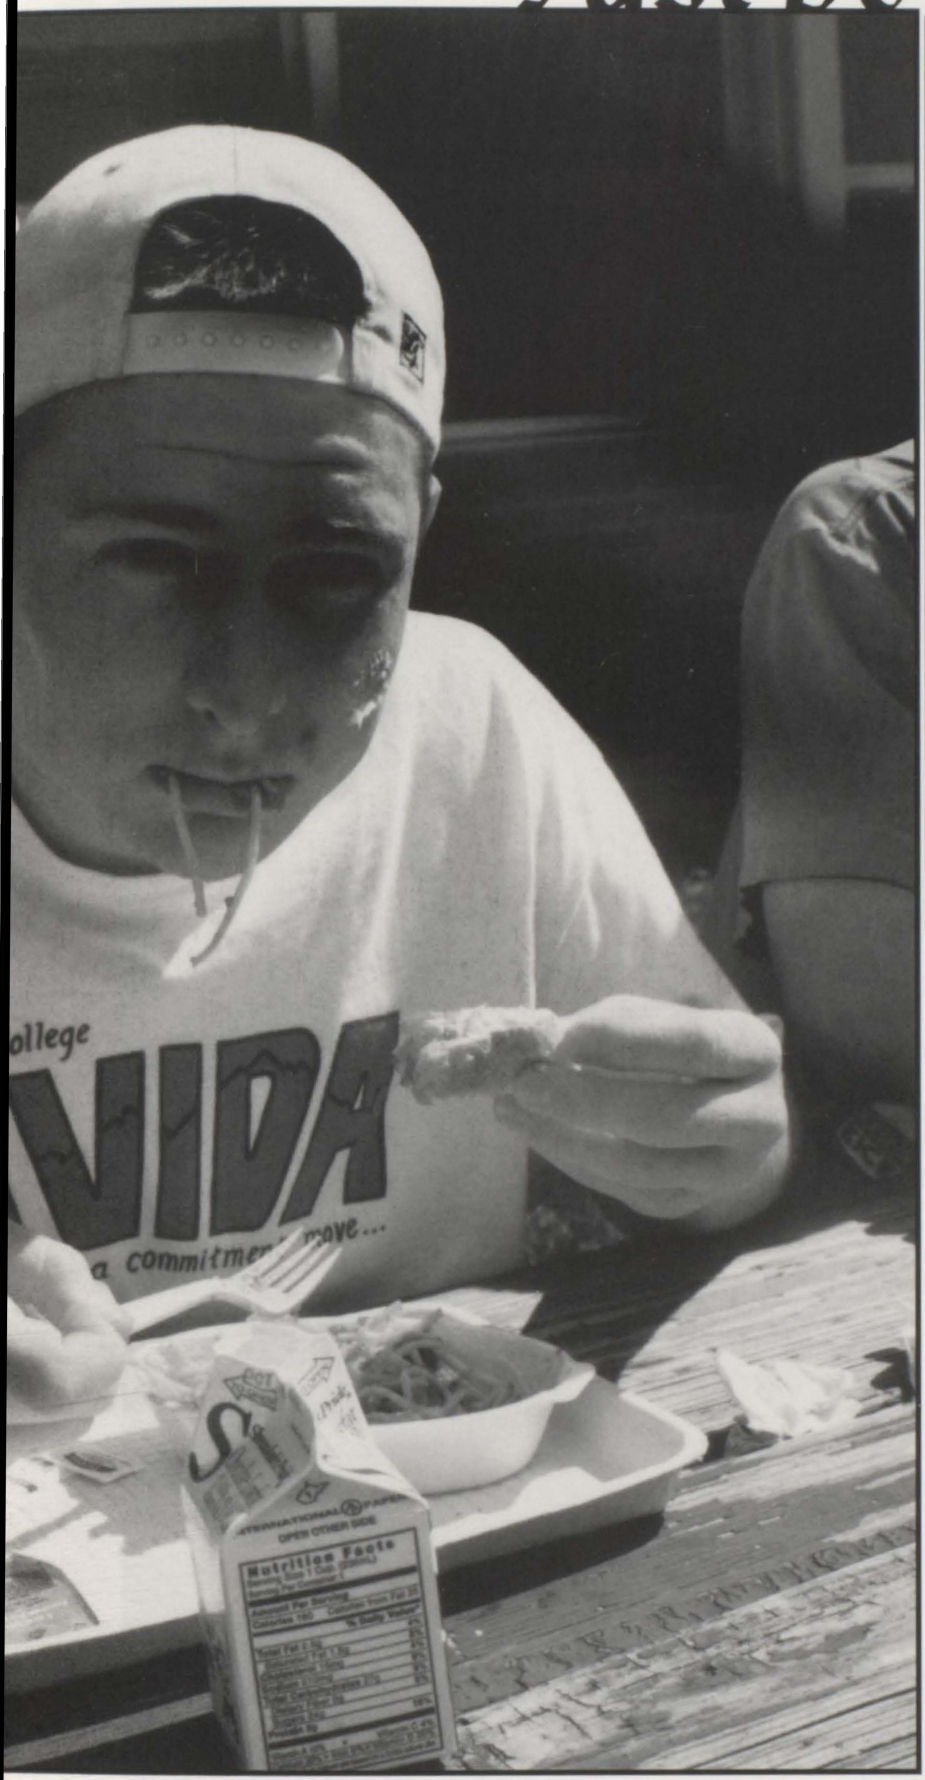


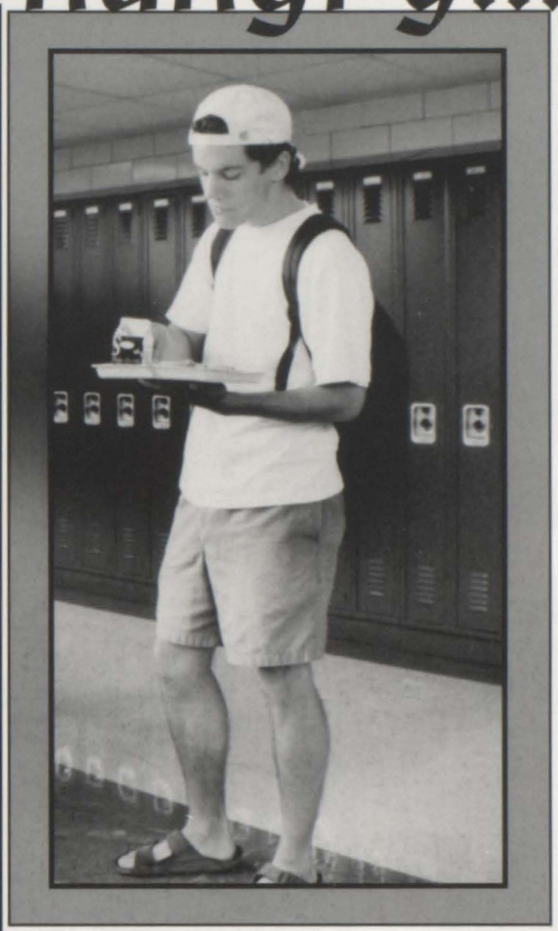
Above: Senior Joe McCabe opens his mouth as wide as he can while he tries to eat all of his spaghetti in one bite. Joe's zeal show just how starved and deprived Mason students really are(n't).

Left: This group of seniors pretends they're not looking at the camera and tries to act as candid as possible.



Just be hungry...





Senior Brad Frost feels that standing up to eat saves the most space and energy. Or there just might not have been enough room. Sorry, Brad.

Lunch is bad at Mason. Let's face it. We are forced to stand in THREE MILE-LONG LINES while the seniors cut in front of all the underclassmen using lines like, "Hey (insert name here)!! I haven't talked to you in so long!" On top of the fact that it takes eons to get food that we don't really want to eat in the first place, we have what seems like a total of three minutes to eat it. Granted, cafeteria food isn't HIGH-MAINTENANCE, but all we're asking is to have time to eat slowly and not feel NAUSEATED as we walk to our next class. Let's stop bad-mouthing for a moment and ponder all the positives about lunch. At least we have one. We do get chicken nuggets, grilled cheese, and ice cream. Of course these foods are overshadowed by their disgusting counterparts: Pizza pockets, (what is in those things anyway?) CUP O'VEGGIES, (which could've been sitting there for months, for all we know...) and steak and cheese things--there is no better description. Lunch does, however, serve as a good time to MAKE UP HOMEWORK you didn't get to, and you'll notice many of the students on this page are doing just that. Not to mention the fact that students can finally converse with their FRIENDS without having to whisper or reign themselves in (Unless the Jets lose and Mr. T is in a foul mood...) On the whole, I suppose lunch could be worse. And one of these days, maybe it will be longer, but until then, let's keep learning how to digest our food twice as fast.

Millennium

As if you haven't heard enough about it yet...

It's the end of the world as we know it...

Greg Stovall

The truth about Y2K is this: nothing happened. Nothing. Not even a broken toilet in New Zealand. Luckily, this let Mason students relax and just celebrate the coming of the millennium. The hype about the DC celebration turned out to be just that: hype, and left many of those who made the trek down to the nation's capital disappointed, and with a crowd of about ten thousand people to escape from. Down on the mall, the lucky ones found sturdy trees and climbed up to watch the fireworks, but otherwise, the higlights included watching the heads of the people in front of you and making sure you didn't get separated from your group. As for those homebodies who decided not to brave the mall, we hear the parties were great, though yearbook is not authorized to make any comment beyond that... ahem. We do know, however, that it was a New Year's to remember (for those who can), despite the numerous warnings about Y2K. As for this millennium, we still can't tell what the difference is...

What's your "Millennium memory"?

"Down on the mall we fit 8 people in one tree to watch the fireworks, and got so bored that we started throwing money and taunting passers-by."

~Mary Prendergast

"Robin and I drove 10 hours down to Nashville to see a Faith Hill concert and then drove another 10 hours back, but it was worth it."

~Becky Davis

"Well, I went to a party and I'm sure it was really great, but to tell you the truth I can't really remember..."

Okay, first off I would like to dispell the rumor circulating that our rich little town produces rich kids with Mercedes. There is only one Mercedes in our parking lot -- okay maybe two, and only one BMW -- and it's an '84. We do, however, have a good amount of Hondas, Toyotas, and Fords. And then there's your token Volvo, Volkswagen, or Mazda. But really, it's not that bad -- for every nice car there's an equal and opposite hoopdy. Though some Mason students may not have the cleanest of driving records, we're a pretty good bunch, with no hit-and-runs or major accidents to report. However, that doesn't mean there haven't been a few license suspensions and speeding tickets. So we're a little reckless, but who can resist sliding around in the snow in Ethan Crouch's truck, ascending snow drifts in Peter Corbino's Navajo or trying to fit as many people as possible in Krista Locklar's Altima? Even when the parking fee was raised, the senior parking lot scrapped, and the lottery for permits drawn, Mason students still gave the administration a healthy "don't care" and parked wherever the heck they pleased. So keep it up everyone, evade the police and we'll all keep having fun. And in closing, I believe there's a song lyric that sums up driving at Mason: "My Mazarati does 185 -- I lost my license, now I don't drive..." Keep on truckin, only watch out for pedestrians!

Senior Lizzie Buckingham smiles impishly as she prepares to broadcast Mr. Kirby's (Michael Bracken) Wall Street obsession -- and Mrs Kirby's disappointment with their sex life...

Below: The entire Sycamore family rushes to Mr. Kirby's (Junior Michael Bracken) aid as Mr. Kohlenkhov (Junior Eric Jacobs) flees the scene of the attack.
Below Left: Senior Jordan Wilson gives us another wonderful performance in a Mason production. He always seems to get the most amusing parts.
Third Below: "And the beautiful princess returned home to the castle," Senior Hilary Kautter preens herself while the rest of the Sycamore family ignores her.

You Can't Take it With You was just one more mark of Mason excellent theatre productions. When the lights came up, the audience was transported into another world: the world of the eccentric Sycamore Family. Mrs Sycamore (Lizzy Buckingham) was writting plays on the typewriter that had been accidentally delivered to the house years before. Mr. Sycamore (Joel Adriance) and Mr. De-Pinna (Brad Frost) were constructing fireworks in the basement. And Grandpa (David Frost) had not a worry in the world. When one of the daughters, Alice (Hilary Kautter) falls in love with a well-bred vice-president of her company, she must introudce these two families from different worlds. Directed by the wonderful Mr. Marino, this play was astonishing!

Just be crazy...

What do you consider an immortal line from the last few plays?

"You must remember Mr. Kirby, Mr, Kohlenkhov is a Russian, and Russians tend to look on the dark side."
-Thomas Bracken

"Everybody got sex?"
-Lizzy Buckingham

"I'll salt your beets, and you'll salt mine."
-Mr. Marino

"Life is chasing around inside of me, like a squirrel."
-Eric Jacobs

"I'll follow you to the end of the world...but the kitchen is fine."
-Thomas Bracken

"It was five o'clock a couple hours ago."
-Cieran

"What's your favorite drama memory?

"Call backs for "It's a Wonderful Life," and Lena Hull was supposed to scream and sprint off the stage, when she started to run she tripped on her sandal, fell and slid off the stage."
-Lizzy Buckingham

Opening night of "You can't take it with you," when I was running up the stairs, and fell flat on my face, and everyone saw me."
-Hilary Kautter

"In "You can't take it with you," when a big Russian (Eric Jacobs) body slammed me over his knee and I blacked out for two seconds...wait a minute, that sucked.
-Michael Bracken

Just be elegant...

Hello Dolly is a lively musical based on an exuberant busybody, an uptight shopkeeper, a stately milliner, and two naive clerks at Vandergelder's Hay and Feed. It takes place in Yonkers around the turn of the century, and surrounds the plight of Dolly Levi, a matchmaker/dancer/anything you want her to be. She is in the market for a (rich) husband, and sets her sights on Mr. Vandergelder, a stern old shopkeeper. The show is hilarious and full of showmanship as it follows Dolly's pursuit of the stingy old bat. Mason's production was marked by incredible performances by K.C. Atabaki (Dolly), Tim Sharpe (Vandergelder), and many other mason thespians. The show included dancing waiters, parasols, Jacob Agnew screaming exclamations such as "Holy Cabooses!" and "Pheasant!!!" and Seeno pretending he couldn't dance. (yeah right!) The show was wonderful in all aspects. Tha acting was incredible, the orchestra was wonderful, and the songs and dances were beautiful. Probably one of the best shows in mason history, it received an unprecedented six curtain calls on the last night, as the audience didn't want the show to end.

The Star's of the show, KC Atabaki and Senno Merobshoev steels the audiences breath by her wonderful persomance. With their unique, and striking dance moves, these two together made a perfect match, wether they were getting down on the dance floor at Prom, or on stage, no one could take their eye off these two.

Second Above: Senior Tim Sharp made yet another wonderful performance for a Mason production.

Near Top: Bronwyn Llewelyn, Morgan Burfield, Meredith Griffiths, Eric Jacobs, and Lauren Newton absorb some positive kharma John Lennons grave.

Near Bottom: Meredith Griffiths, Meghan Sommers, and K.C. Atabaki catch some rays on a huge rock after finding some of the only untouched beauty in New York.

Below: Lizzy Buckingham makes fun of Patrick Swayze's girly hands.

What's your best (clean) memory?

"Our first day of taking classes at the University of Santander we were all a little nervous and everything was pretty tense, and then our Spanish Professor walked in and started throwing chalk and erasers at people just to break the ice. After that we knew everything was going to be okay."

~ Liz Gannon

"My favorite memory was the abundance of Godiva chocolate stores where, though I regret this now, I gained an unprecedented eight pounds. There was one right next to the hotel and that was disastrous."

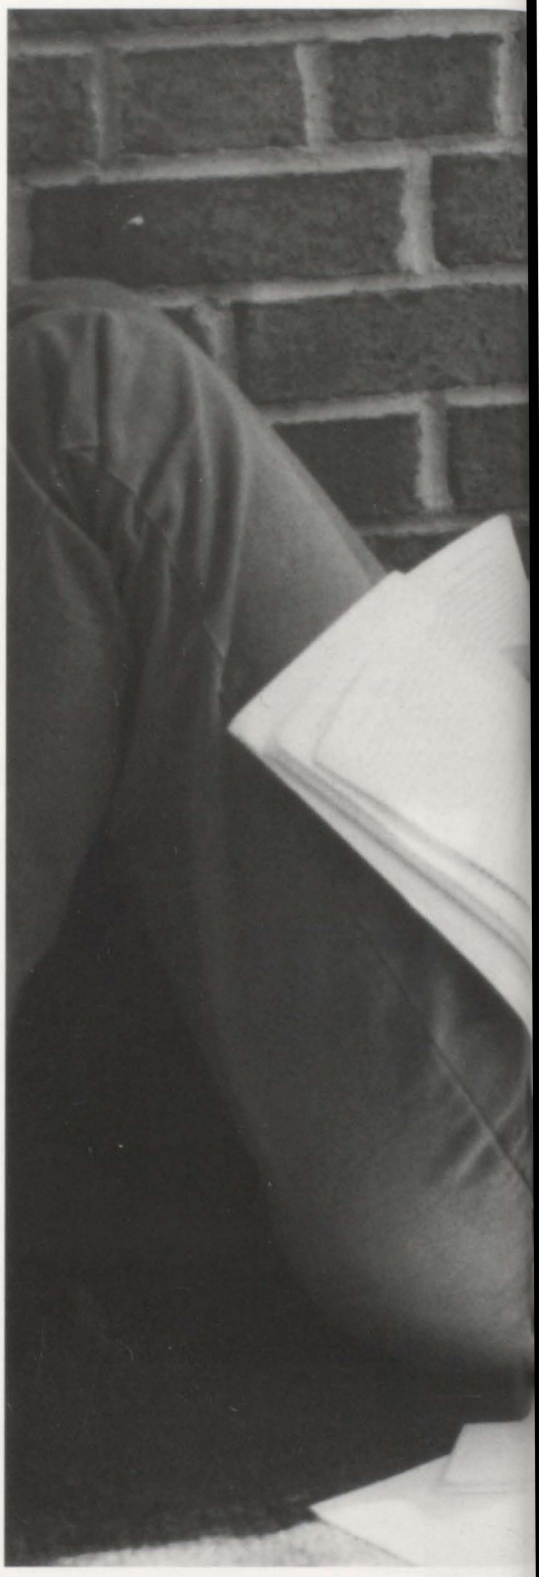
The City That Never Sleeps

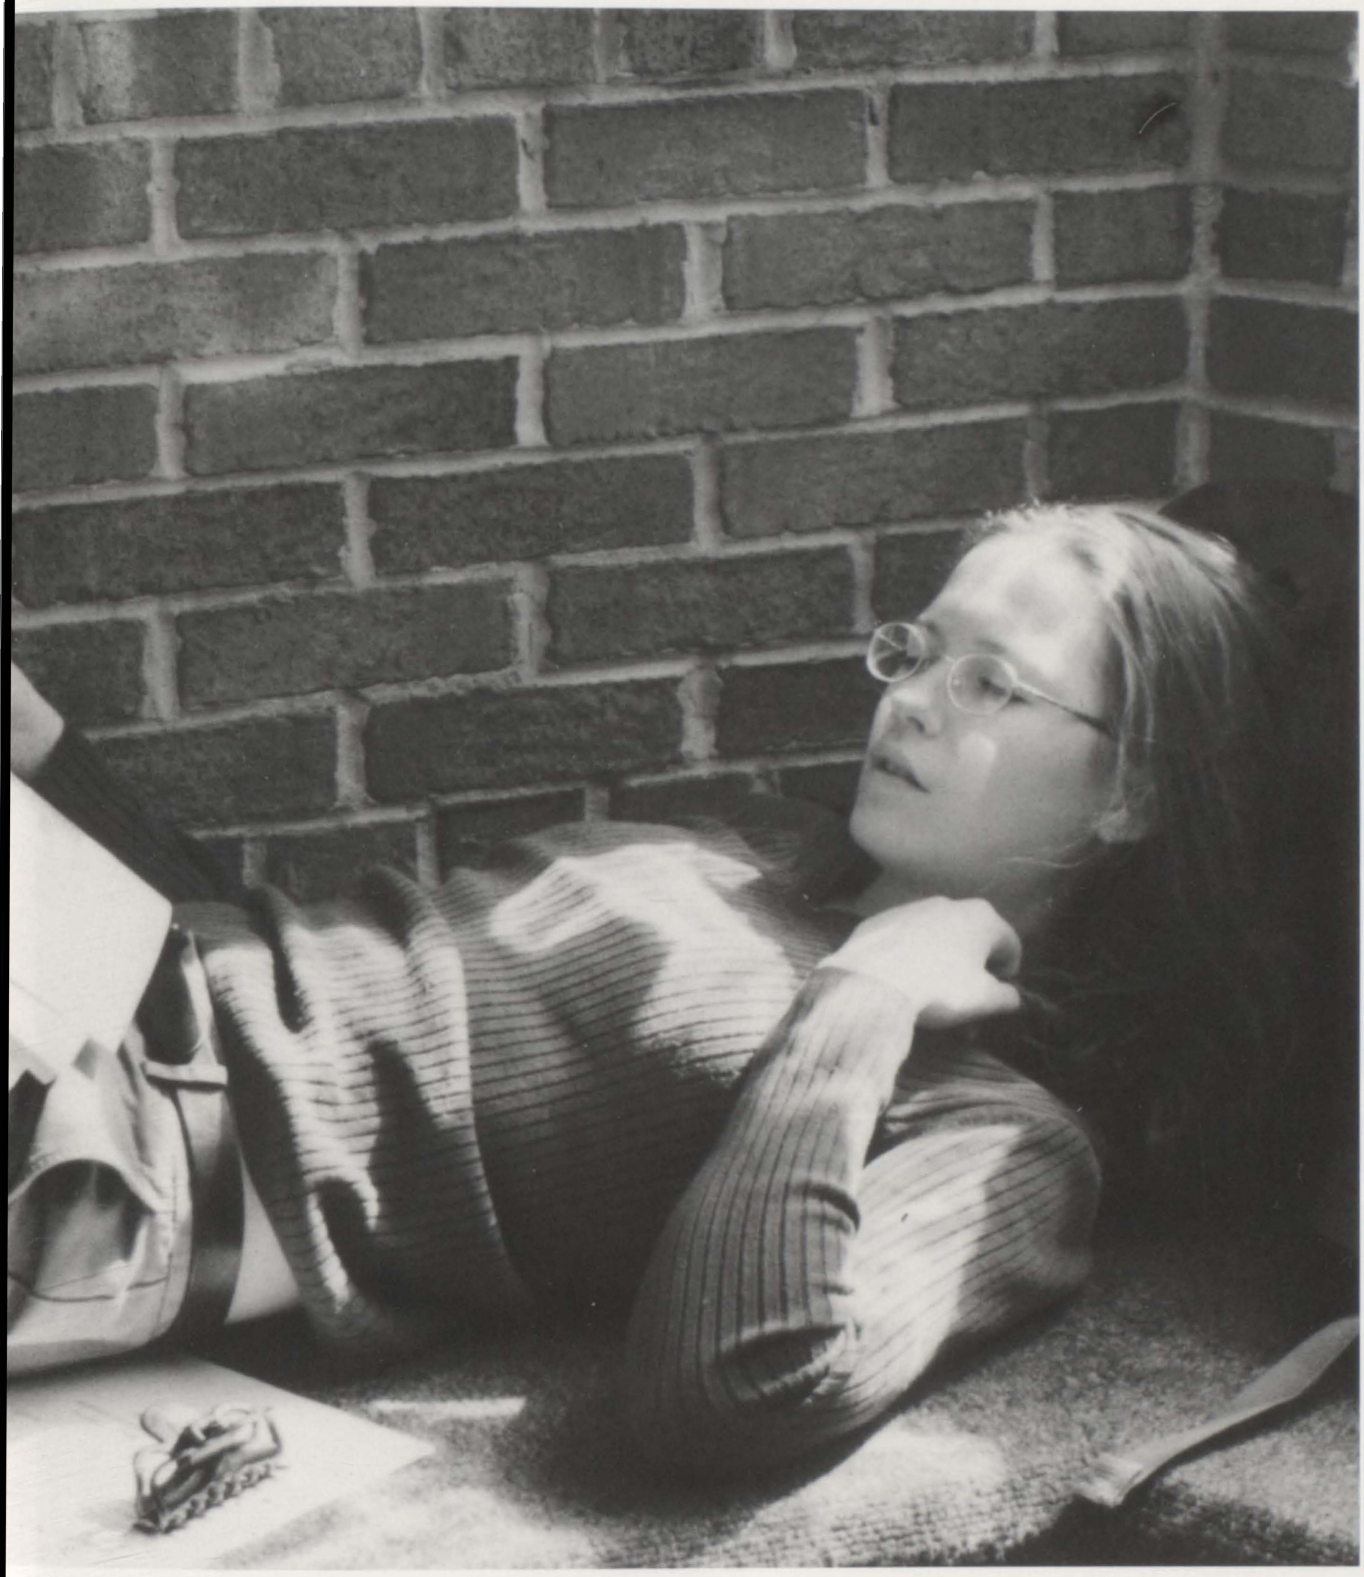
Trip to the Big Apple

Think but this...

This year passed smoothly as far as the administration was concerned. Mason remained the most challenging public school in the area (as usual), students ritualistically pulled their hair out due to stress, and teachers mercilessly assigned huge projects mere days after vacation. The class of 2000, one of the most academically competitive the school has ever seen, thrived, with the top thirty percent of the class maintaining a GPA of at least 3.875. The underclassmen, whether they were adjusting to high school or adjusting to IB classes, handled the new obstacles well and will hopefully make the next few classes not only the largest in history, but the most academically superior as well. Though the computers still don't work, multiple papers are still due the same day, and physics problems are just as hard, the student body takes these challenges in stride. More and more teachers meant more confusion, and all five hundred-some students continued to perplex the powers that be; but overall the year was very successful.



Just be scholarly....



Academics

What did you learn today? Mason teachers rap to their students...

This group of Seniors go a little crazy because of all the schoolwork, the mountains of applications, and assorted other stress they're dealing with. Michael Degnan (center) seems to have had the most adverse reaction, as his world has been turned upside down.

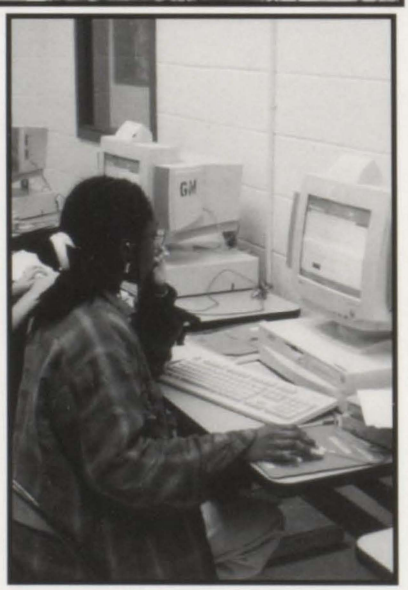
What a scene... It appears that Junior Thomas Bracken is using telekinesis not only to transport his copy of Crime and Punishment across the table, aut also to transport its contents directly into his brain. We can't imagine why he would do this in what is undoubtedly his favorite class. As for classmate Eric Jacobs, do we really want to know what's going on in his brain? Evil thoughts are brewing, we'll leave it at that!

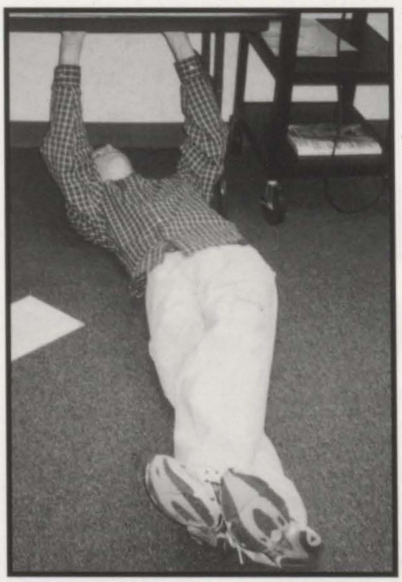
OK, class is over. Why are these Sophomores still here? This is taking the love of English above and beyond normal.



During the unlikely event that there is a working computer to be found, students like Folake Ojumu can often be found hard at work.

Below: Such a diligent worker, Junior Joe Stroup reads on without distraction. We'll be taking bets on whether the book under the table is really a copy of the Cliffs Notes for Crime and Punishment. Not that any Masonites ever resort to Cliffs Notes...

At Right: Sophomore Galen Messing listens attentively as Jenny Donaldson tries to explain the complexity of Freud's sexual theories as apparent in the Oedipus Complex. Truly intriguing...



No matter how many times we tell Junior Matt McFarland that the legs of the table will infact support it, he feels compelled to hold it up himself, day and night. It's his excuse to stay in Ms. Sinha's class as much as possible.

Right: Upon his announcement as a new teacher, Dr. Albert J. DeFazio III felt the need to stretch. Here, Brad Allan, Beau Fay, and NathanHamme mimic the immortal moment.

Just Be Typical...

What is typical a George Mason? Well, lot of things, including stum bling outside into the Senio courtyard, overloaded wit books, prepared to study throug the incredibly short lunch pe riod, as Senior Joe McCabe doing at left.

Typical

Gossip
Clock-watching
Grade-grubbing
Eating in alcoves
Sleeping through 7th
Bringing flowers fo friends
Working through lunch

Atypical

Getting to class on time
Remembering donuts
Finding bagles during nutrition break
The cafeteria actually following the menu
Doing homework the night before
Sleep

Mrs. Bracken, everybody's favorite (and only) career counselor, typically receives countless visits each day from college-bound students such as Senior Mike Degnan. Whatever advice she's been giving sure seems to be working... After all, Mike did get early acceptance to Haverford. Senior Slump starts now...

All work and no play makes Hunter Gray a very, very tired boy! With the strenuous academics at Mason, one can typically find a few dozers, and the occasional drone of a snore from the next desk over.

A typical day just isn't complete without that la minute homework help from buddies duri lunch. Here we see Sophomore-Senior intera tion as Ellen Keister gives Galen Messing a han

Lunch time at last! The Senior Courtyard is typically a happy scene were seniors can laugh and eat without the hassles of learning... unless there's a test next block.

Unfortunately, the typical Mason scene also inevitably includes a few injured Masonites, such as Junior Thomas Bracken, who, despite the torn ligaments in his ankel, manages to sport the all-out thug look.

During the course of a day, it is typical for studens to stop in their tracks and take a pensive moment to reflect on their day's activities. But that's now what Senior Brett Kinsella is doing. He's really thinking, "Who is that girl?!"

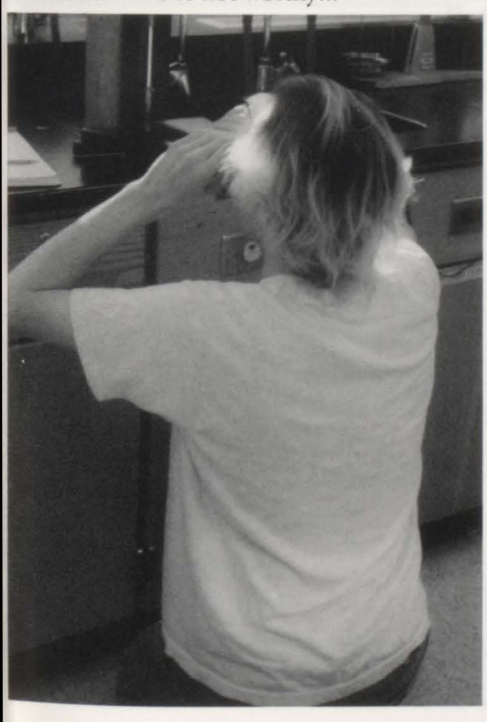
Ahhh! There are dozens, if not hundreds of threats made by upperclassmen each day to trample the next freshman who stops in the hallway, causing that incredibly obnoxious but typical traffic jam. Keep moving for God's sake!!!

Learning is not the only thing on students' minds. For many, religion is a large part of their typical day, like Junior Kevin Smith who takes time out of his busy schedule to worship the God of science. "We're not worthy..."



A Day in the Life...

7:45 Block 1 - Bring your breakfast to class.

9:30 TA - Complain when no one brought donuts.

9:51 Block 3 - Make a big scene about how you'll never get into college.

11:38 Lunch - Whine about the B you just received and say your mother will be taking it up with the teacher.

12:08 Block 5 - Push your way through the frosh-packed hallways, threatening death to the next obstruction.

1:05 Block 7 - Sit quietly in the back of the room watching the second hand on your watch.

2:45 Dismissal - Run like hell.

"C'mon guys!" Junior Sarah Michalski calls to her friends. At last the day is over, but it's typical for those who want to flee like a bat out of hell to be held back by their lingering friends.

The History of the World (abridged)

And so the world began... First there were dinosaurs, but they were whiped out by who-knows-what, maybe an asteroid th raised enough dust to block out the sun. In any event, it was some terrible disaster that foreshadowed the coming of t Human race... But it wasn't that simple, there had to be all different kinds of people within the race. There were the Roma and their orgies (food orgies, that is), the Greeks trying to knock off the Romans, the Egyptians and their pyramids, and all so of other people (but those are the ones we learn about in World Civ., enough said). Blah blah blah, many years and many wa later we get to the Middle Ages, whi was essentially when the sun went b hind a cloud for an entire period of h tory, all the orgies and merrime stopped, feudal lords, knights, a royalty battled it out, and everyone walked around with a frown on their faceThank God that's over. People kept fighting o nothing and everything, but hey, at least that led to the founding of the United States. But it really gets interestng again wh we get to all the dictatorial regimes. There's Hitler, Stalin, Lenin, Mousolini, Castro, and a boatload of other guys during a after the Porfiriato (yes Ms. Piacenza, we do remember what we learned last month). And that brings us pretty much up to t present day when the sun rises and sets on the little town of Falls Church, and as far as students are concerned, grades and colle acceptance letters should make the front page of the Post.

Junior genius Kevin Smith appears to be helping fellow classmates Patrick Pitts and Kirsten RoseO'Connell, but look closely, he's really just drawing on Kirsten's hand. This is, of course, no indication of the leniency of Mrs. Piacenza's 5th block history class.

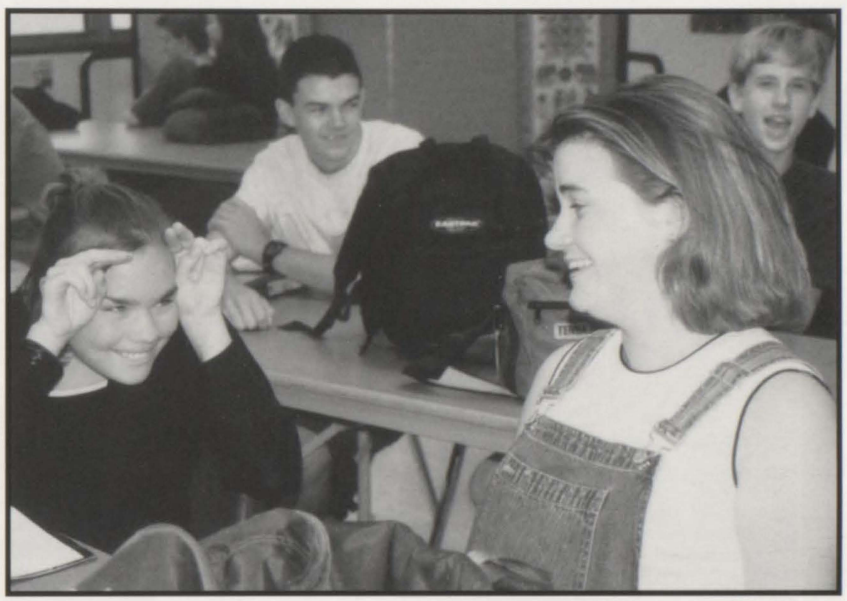
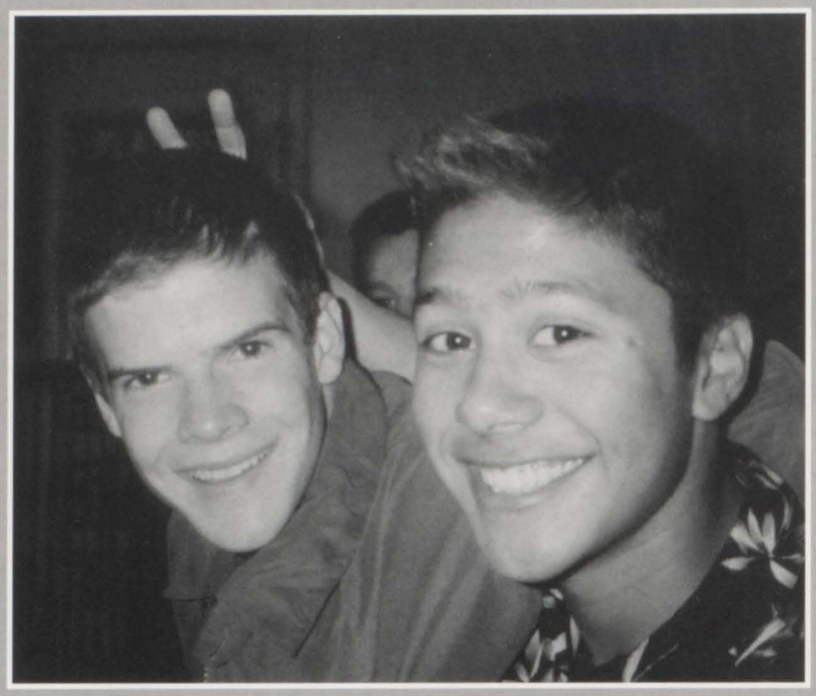
Always enthousiastic about history, Miradey Pin smiles in excitement when she learns that the class will be studying the sexual tendencies of Henry VIII.



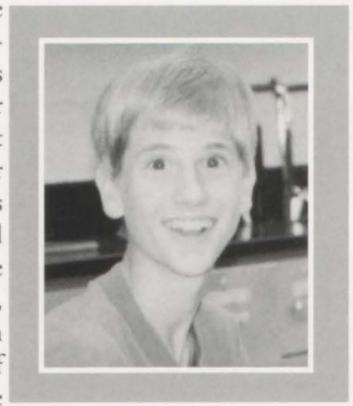
Junior Liz Gannon is pondering one of history's greatest mysteries; what the heck is Betsy doing?!

Does anyone else not remember David Peacock, Beth Pyne, or Megan Watts being founding fathers who signed our Constitution?

There she goes again, Ms. Nolan is undoubtedly the only teacher in school with a club, but does she have the nerve to use it? Let's not find out.



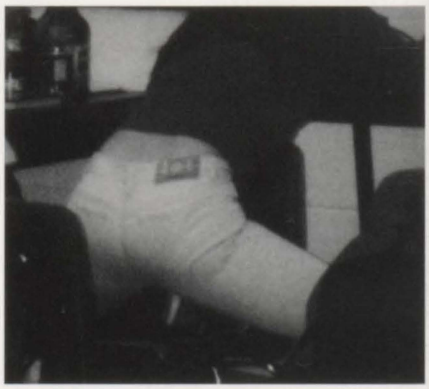
At Left: Junior Thomas Bracken and Senior Nishant Mehr can often be found making scenes, making noise, and quite often making people laugh. In this picture, the two ar obviously high on life and living it up despite the pressures o school. While George Mason prides itself in its outstandin academics, students also learn when to be serious and when t be silly. We firmly believe that almost ever occasion calls for humor no matter what th teachers might think. Center: Junior Kenny Lasso always has a smil ing face for all who se him. In the halls and i the classroom, this truly bring Masonite can humor in out the sense of can only everyone. We imagine what could be so funny in chemistry class, bu whatever it was certainly drew a response from Kenny. Below: Juniors Colin Kikuchi, Becky Davis, and David Lim have a slight lapse of sanity after realizing that their fish in th tank have turned to cannibalism. Try as they may, they just couldn't feed them enough to keep them from taking a chomp out of their chums.



Mason's Silly Side...

"What? You have the nerve to ask me for a pen? What makes you think I have any extras?" taunts Sophomore Caitlin Flaherty.

Mason's Backside ...



Just Be SILLY

At Right: Senior Jessica Taylor is... OK we have NO idea what she is doing. Among the possibilities are: feeling her baby-smooth skin, poking herself for no apparent reason, and attempting to scare small children. What ever it is, we appreciate her attempt to make her classmates laugh. It was not in vain. Center: Does anyone feeling more Adrience turned to the ex- of Mada- where she ing yoga? ther. What Have You Gotten Away With In Class?

"Doing a musical rendition of Oedipus Rex, doing a flip off a desk for the grand finale, and breaking the ceiling in the process."
-Junior Michael Bracken

"I once called a teacher a !@#$%^& when he was standing right next to me.
-Sophomore Jenny Ross

"When I was going to T.J. I visited Mrs. Tucker's class, and when she turned her back I jumped out the window."
-Junior Colin Kikuchi

"I bought a homecoming dress during 6th period once."
-Junior Becky Davis

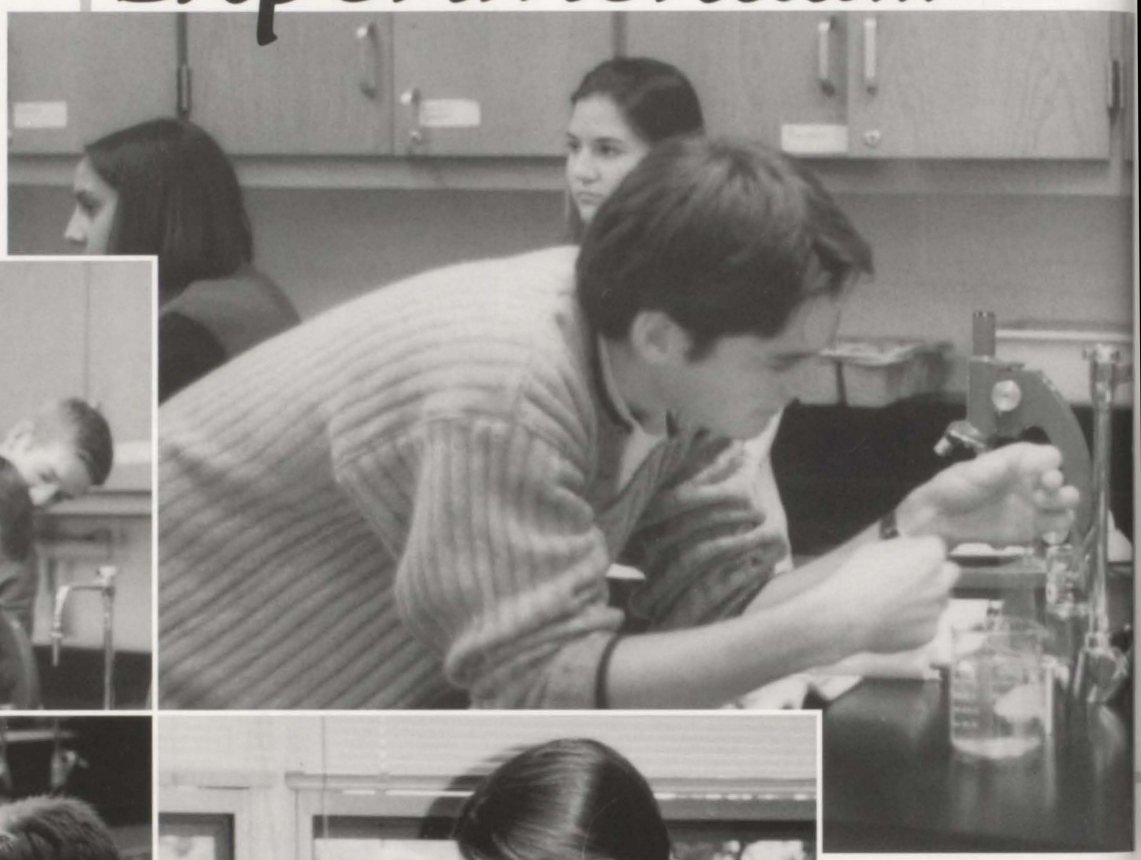
Feeling rather excited, an anonymous biology lab group found much pleasure in viewing a classmate's "bodily fluids" with a high-powered microscope lense. This was not the first occurance of this type, but at least one of them went to the bathroom...
-anonymous

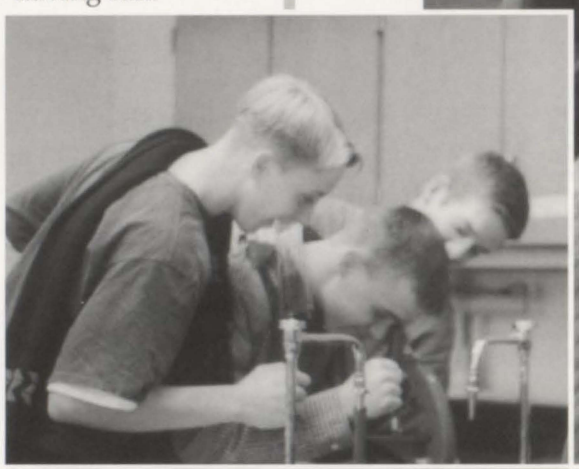
"Palm-sized spitballs on the ceiling of Ms. Dean's room."
-Senior Adam Suleske

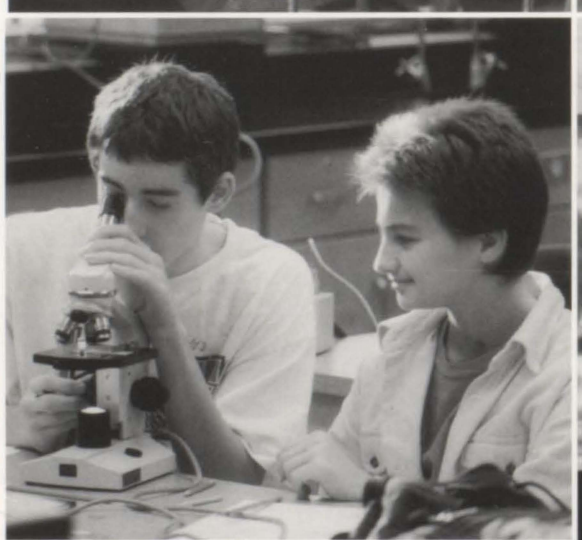
Just Be Experimental...

Do football players and chemistry equipment really mix? We certainly think so. Senior Michael O'Connor, Junior Michael Griffin, and Senior Tim Gardina proved themselves beautifully in this light lab, just as they did time after time on the field.

Juniors Nathan Hamme and Michael Bracken look on in awe as their classmate Robin Miller has an incredible realization: the microscope is not plugged in. So the lab didn't have the expected results, at leat they're having fun.





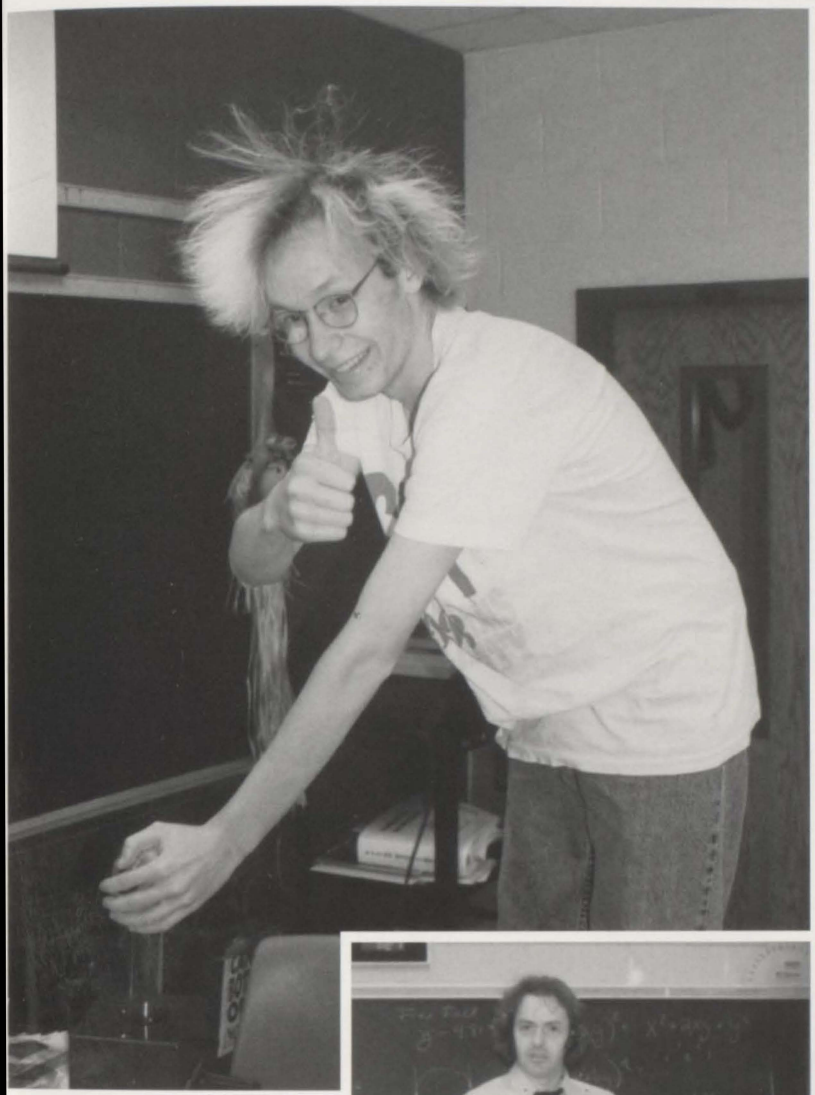


Sophomore Andrew Fauntleroy makes an amazing scientific discovery while Misha Samsonov sits quietly, pondering how he can get credit and a Nobel Prize for Andrew's work.

Above: Do not disturb bri liant scientists at wor With his sleeves rolled u and a determined look o his face, Senior Be Dworken dives into this b ology lab.

Left: Juniors Dawa Sherp and Sarah Michalski hav truly mastered the art telepathy. Dawa looks i the microscope and Sara draws what her partn sees. How do they do it?

Right: Sophomores Jenny Ross, Irene Farrow, and Maggie Davis are either absolutely entranced by the magic of graphing calculators, in awe of the physical world, or bored out of their minds. You be the judge.
Below: Junior Kevin Smith sports the all-out mad scientist look. Some say it's because of the Van DeGraff generator, but we think there are other explanations...



Top 10 things the teacher doesn't want to hear during a lab

10. Uh-oh
9. Wait, we weren't supposed to eat this stuff?
8. Ummmm.... I think it's still alive.
7. Is this equipment expensive?

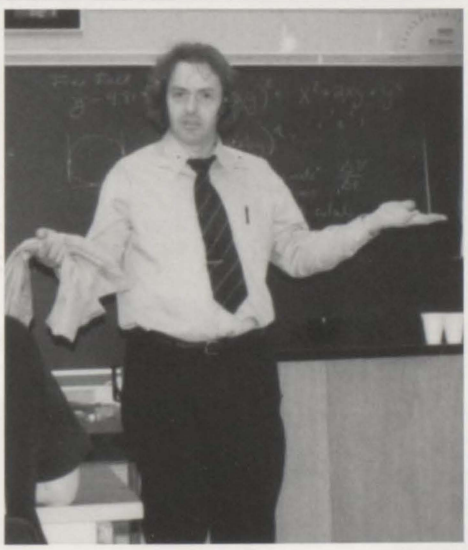
5. I could have sworn you said to mix amonia and hydrochloric acid.
4. Boom.
3. Where's the fire blanket?
2. So now you tell me I wasn't supposed to do that?!
1. It burns! It burns!

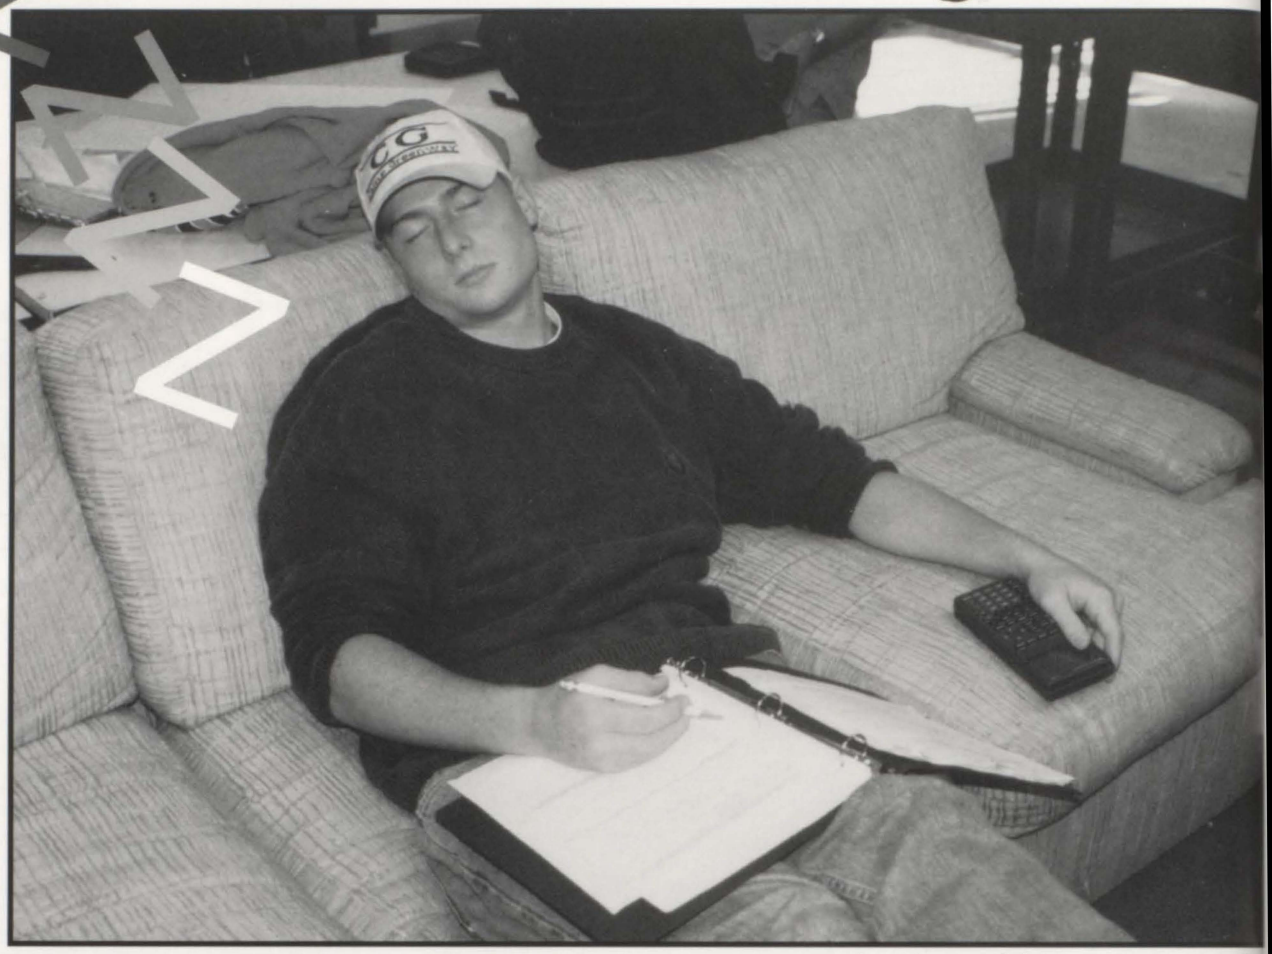


"Force is mass times acceleratiom. Acceleration is change in velocity over time. But we can't seem to define time, so essentially we know nothing. What's not to understand?" Look at our faces, Mr. Applegate, that was way over our heads.

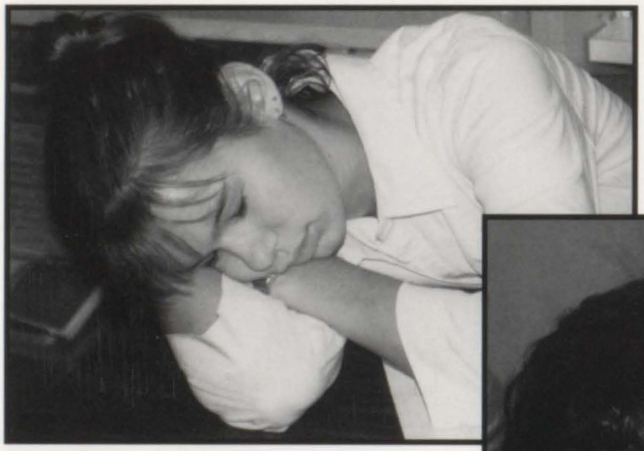
Not only are Seniors Meg Byer and Hilary Kautter viewing some amazing specimen in what appears to be their favorite class of all time, they get to wear togas at the same time. Life doesn't get much better than that.

ZZZ Just be lethargic...

Masonites might be extremely intelligent, but who doesn't love to catch a few "Z"s now and then? The truth is, there is only so much knowledge that the human brain can process at a time, and here at George Mason, we pride ourselves in exceeding this limit nearly every day. An eceptional few, like Senior Ben Love here, are actually capable of learning while they sleep. So teachers, give us a break, we can still hear with our eyes closed!



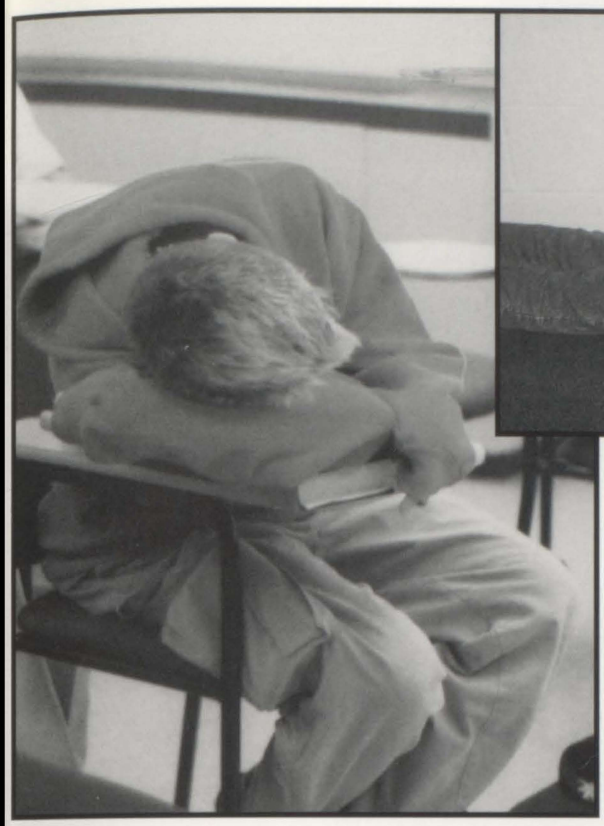
Right: Some of the greatest artists fin their inspiration in their sleep. W look forward to seeing Sophomor Davey Andrews' work in all the bigge museums...



"Close your eyes and think about what the author was trying to convey with this passage. Jessica, what do you think?... Jessica?!"

Osmosis: the process by which students, such as sophomore Katiusk Arias, absorb knowledge through head-to-backpack contact.

Sophomore Katie Velez sleeps peacefully through class, prompting the unanswerable question: don't these people ver notice when there's a camera mere inches from their face?



History is always more interesting when seen through your eyelids. At least that's Junior John Becker's philosophy.

For some like Sophomore Christina Sedney, this lunchtime nap is the only thing that keeps them going through the day.

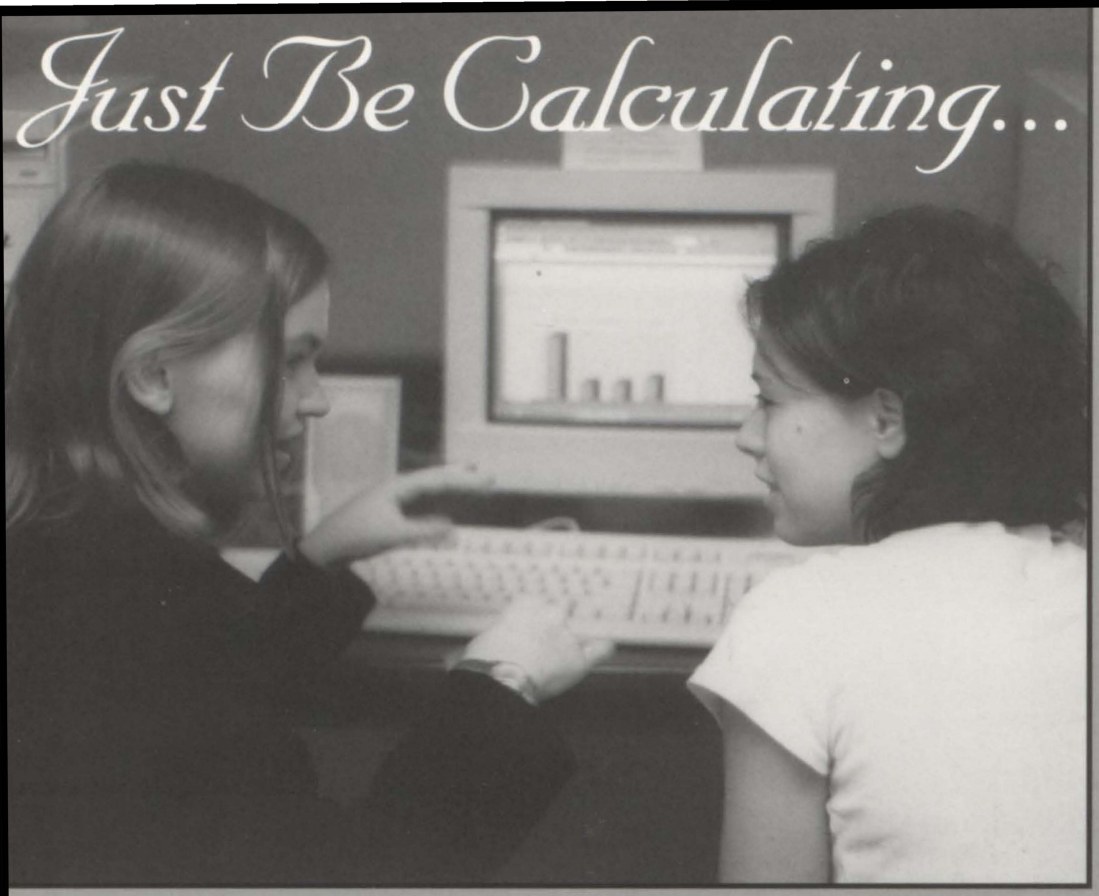
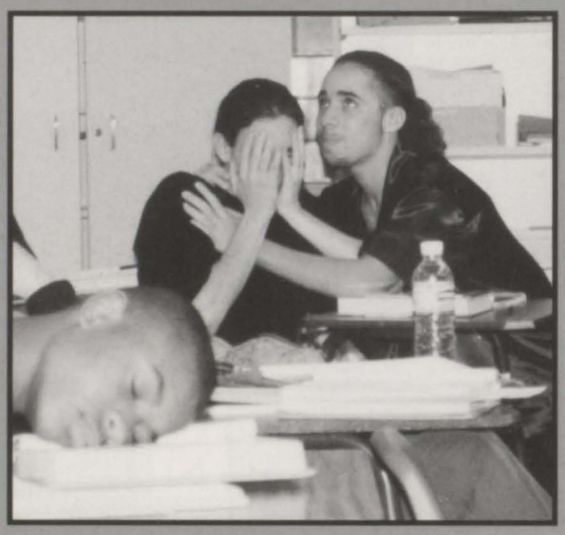
Just Be Calculating...



Junior Julia Bradshaw shocks and amazes math classmate Lena Hull with her incredible magic powers that enable her to wave her hands at the computer and get it to actually work.



Sophomore Michael Taylor is having a mental breakdown, but thank goodness classmate Michael Burgos is there to comfort him. Take a deep breath and count backwards from ten, it's only a math test!

Senior Ben Grusin gets one last look at t impossible math problem that he will inevita figure out as soon as he's turned the test in a left the room. We feel your pain!

"Geez, Ben, I thought everyone knew the integral of sec(x)tan(x) was sec(x)! Where have you been?" Senior Erin Adkins taunts.

How will math be useful in your future?

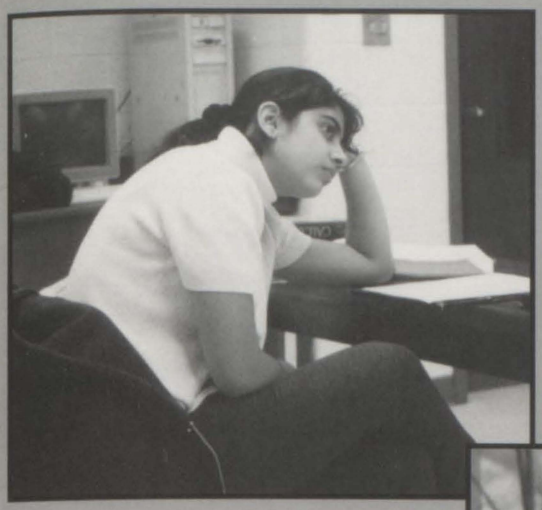
"Gambling away my family's wealth"
- Senior Gabe Ruth

"Pretty much never, except for taxes"
-Junior Daniel Arnaudo

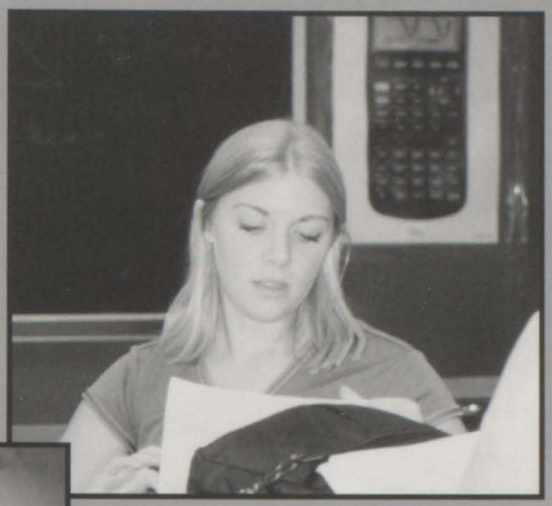
"Definitely for adding up my grocery bill"
-Junior Colin Kikuchi

"Mixing drinks, it's all in the proportions"
-Anonymous

"Tax fraud and embezzlement"
-Sophomore Kevin Dorsey

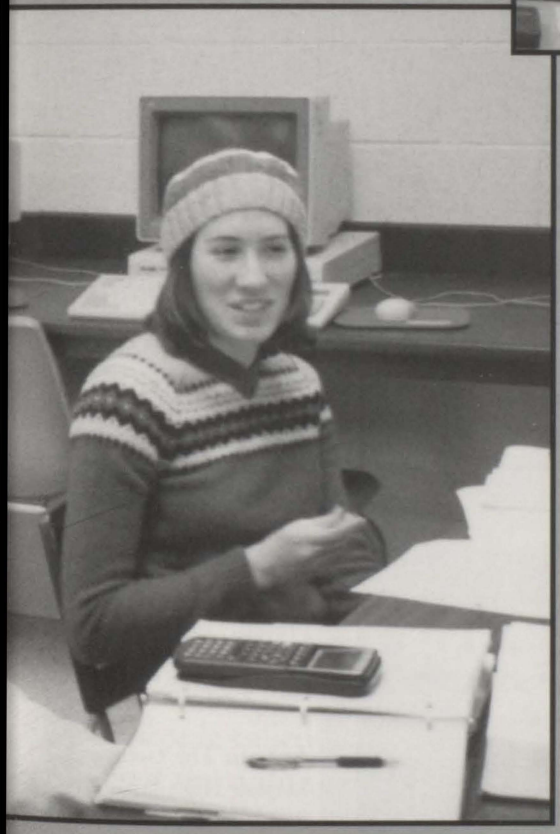


Above: Senior Divya Watal would like nothing better than to sit through yet another seventh block Calculus II class. Her heated passion for math clearly will never die.



Right: Senior Hilary Kautter looks at her paper in utter disbelief. "You don't really expect me to do this, do you?"

Below: Junior Nathan Hamme slams his head on his desk in frustration while classmate Jimmy Brock prepares to throw his arms up in defeat, yet Matt McFarland continues to work diligently, proving that even geniuses have to work sometimes.



Above: Junior Minister of Mass Beau Fay never misses an opportunity to show off his enormous biceps. "Keeping my muscles hydrated helps me grow big and strong," he tells us. (Insert Norwegian accent here)

MATH:

For some it's the highlight of their day, for others it's just another hour and a half of sleep in the great nap of life, but for all Masonites it's a routine part of school. Whether you find yourself turning your test in centuries before the rest of the class, or staying late into the night struggling with that one impossible problem, just remember, we're all in this together, guys. We've all felt the frustration of doing a test in ink, only to find it has to be in pencil, or wasting 20 minutes on one question, only to find that you forgot a negative sign 3,000 steps earlier. So get out your pencils and calculators, and suck it up. Only ten minutes until the bell...

Just Be Expressive . . .

Sitting at attention, the sax section waits out a rest... 1, 2, 3, 4, 2, 2, 3, 4... keep counting, you'll get to play one of these days.

They're not really playing... their lips are just frozen to their mouth pieces. These things happen when you have to play in the bitter cold with gale-force winds at the homecoming game!

Above: "Maybe I should have learned the music first... this doesn't seem to fit with what the rest of the group is playing," thinks Senior John Kugleman. Of course we know this musical prodigy is right on beat with everyone else.

At Left: The George Masion High School Band. Need we say more? Finally, some recognition for this extremely talented and musical group of students.

All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players.

At Left: "But Mr. Marino, this'll make me look old!" Senior Lizzy Buckingham whines as Mr. Marino pins a grey whig in place. As soon as she loses the jeans and the impatient look she'll be perfect for the part.

Below: These Mason musicians are playing with so much expression that there's none left to show on their faces. At least that's their excuse... While we can't hear what they're playing, we can be sure it's in tune, on tempo, and beautifully expressive.

Let's not forget all those talented dancers here at Mason. These are just a few of our many students involved in the dance team and elective dance classes.

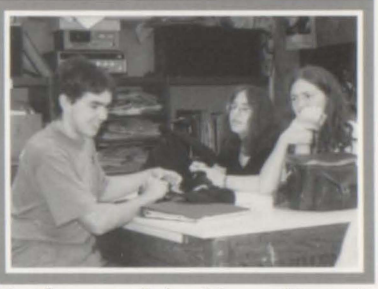
2. Nothing.
1. A print shop assignment. (Imagine that!)



OK, maybe gym isn't an elective, in fact, it's compulsory if you want to graduate, but Sophomore Meisha Samsonov still shows incredible enthousiasm and athletic ability.

Sophomore John-Henry Pitas sits and basks in the attention as classmates Meghan Baer and Elizabeth Twentyman stare adoringly.

At Right: This picture sends mixed messages. Sophomores Kendra Webb and Christina Christianson are content to clean and protect their negatives, but it seems nothing cold be more boring to Junior Angela Carey.

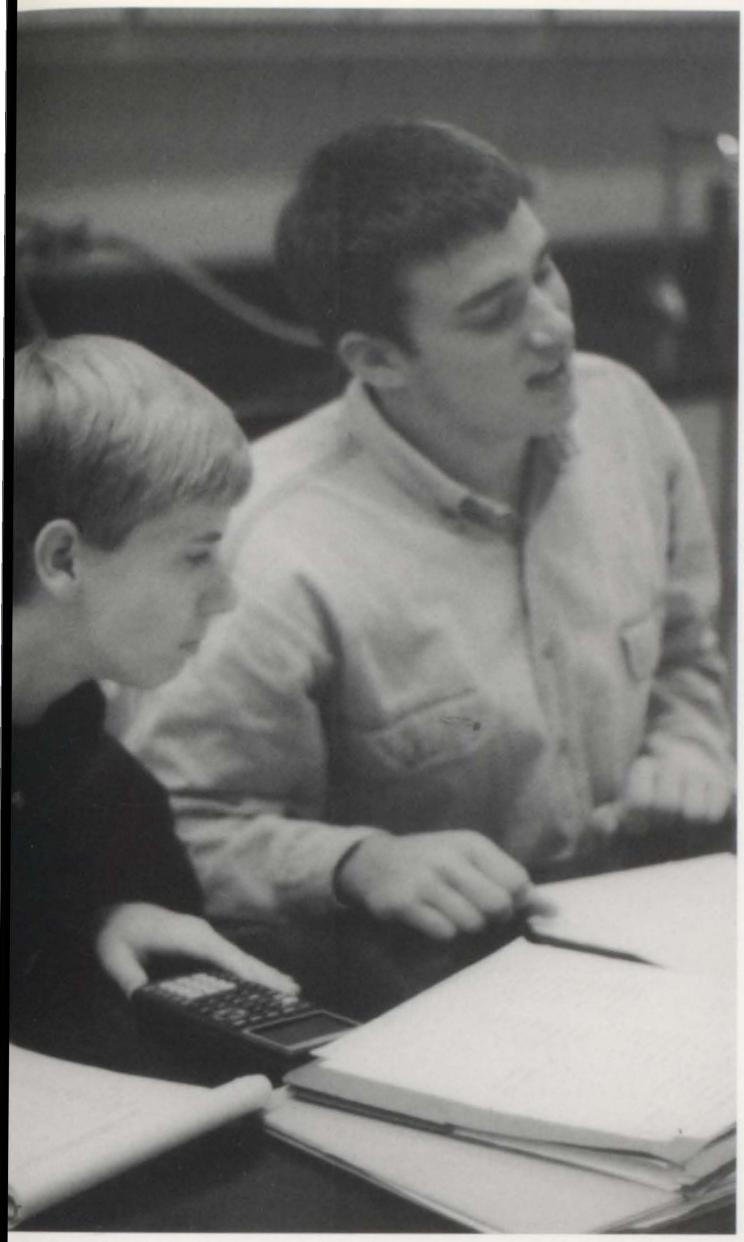
At Left: "Where did I put my Skittles?" wonders our wonderful art eacher, Mrs. Shields, while, Sophomore Katie Velez attempts to snap a shot of a yearbook photographer before they get one of her. Too late!

What did you get for Number 6?

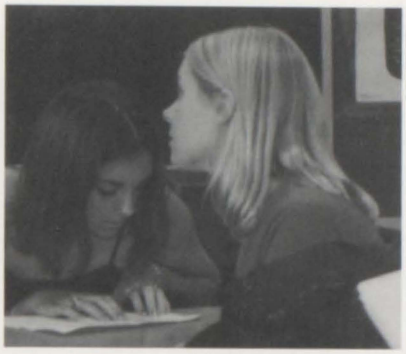
Ever since last year's article in the Lasso told us that just about everyone at Mason cheats, yearbook decided to go out and see if we could find some examples. We thought, there's no way--no one cheats that much. Even though we wanted to dedicate a page to this such "strategic borrowing," we hoped we would not be able to find many examples. Unfortunately, we were wrong. Even with a photographer right next to them, Mason's master filchers still managed! It seems to be that the number of people caught borrowing is miniscule compared to the amount of people who get away with it. I guess we now know why Mason students get such great test scores...

Junior Kevin Smith demonstrates that, "sharing is caring," despite the obvious attempt by his classmate, Cieran Rockwell, to obstruct his view.

Junior Kate Zimmermann is innocently fiddling with her necklace. Is it merely coincidental that her eyes are wandering?



Left: Junior Kenny Lasso is merely "double checking" his work with the assistance of fellow classmate Michael Griffin. A likely story...



Senior Layton Walker demonstrates a common technique here at George Mason. "Mrs. Weber, I was just stretching my back!"

Below: Sophomores Jessica Thomas and Jessica Szymanski demonstrate a fine cooperative effort. This indescrete act was carried out without notice... except by the yearbook staff. Just kidding, we know you're honest souls, this was probably a partner activity anyway.

What's your favorite technique?

Just looking around the room, I swear!

We like to call this technique the "Group Effort".

No technique needed, just lean over and see what you can see...

Just be blatant...

Et tu Brute?

This year was a rebuilding one for most George Mason sports. Though the teams sometimes didn't win large awards, Mason athletes continue to show talent as well as a grace unusual for such a small school. This year marked the comeback of several almost-forgotten Mason programs (including Cross-Country and Wrestling) and the culmination of others in district, championships. The springs sports of '99 showed their true colors with the varsity baseball team clinching the district, and softball having its best showing in seven years. A successful fall season included the accomplishments of state cross-country champ and All-Met Colleen Winzeler, with Jimmy Brock finishing 14th on the men's side. The Girls' Basketball team once again made it to the final four state tournament in Salem, VA, also bringing home the district championship trophy once again. Several athletes hit milestones this year, with Senior Kate Jackson hitting her career 1000 point mark, and Senior Ben Love reaching 1000 points rushing for the season. Mason athletics continue to improve and more strong programs are in the making. Stay tuned...

Just be determined...

AGILITY: Senior Ben Love (the "Killer Bee") pays no attention to the oncoming lineman and continues his drive.

Following a very successful 9-2 season in 1998, the varsity football team entered a much improved Bull Run District including STATE POWERS Madison County and Strasburg. Unfortunately for Mason, these teams lived up to their billing and the Mustangs finished fourth in the district. Their 4-6 record was HIGHLIGHTED by a 36-0 Homecoming victory over Clark County. In addition, Senior Ben Love reached the MILESTONE of 2,000 yards rushing for his carreer. In the 42-0 STOMPING of Colonial Beach, Senior linebacker Greg Stovall set a Mason record for TACKLES in a game with 27. Also, Senior tightend Joe McCabe finished off his season with 20 catches. With many YOUNG PLAYERS, the Mason team was forced to deal with a lack of depth as it was plagued with injuries during the last half of the season, but sophomores such as Dominic Clark (safety) and Matt Bond (quarterback) adjusted well to COMPLETE the squad. Next year's team looks to fill the void left by nine TALENTED SENIORS.

In this picture, Robin Wilson drives past her opponent with ease. Robin has had a great career here at Mason, notorious for her three-point shots which have bailed the team out on numerous occasions.

DRIVE THROUGH

The Mustangs started off slow with a loss at the hands of Liberty, but picked up speed and STAMPEDED their way to an undefeated Bull Run District. The ENLARGED DISTRICT never phased the lady Mustangs as they waltzed through the district tournament BEATING Madison County in the finals. The Mustangs captured the Region B title as well with a THRILLING 45-43 victory over Prince Edward County, the NUMBER ONE TEAM in the State. In the first round of the State Tournament, the Mustangs DEFEATED the Pointers of West Point for the second straight year. In their second CONSECUTIVE season in Salem, the Mustangs lost a heart breaker to the very same Prince Edward team. The team was led by Senior FIRST TEAM ALL-STATE player Kate Jackson, Senior second team all-state player Robin Wilson and Mason CAREER REBOUND LEADER Kerry Kuhn. While they were denied a second STRAIGHT STATE TITLE, the Lady Mustangs indubitably over-achieved.

The beginning of the school year brings with it a SHOCK of activity for the majority of Mason students, but not for this year's powerful Cross Country runners! Practicing since mid-August under the new LEADERSHIP of Head Coach Julie Bravin (after the departure of the much loved Mr. Lindgren), the FEARSOME Mason harriers came into the season well prepared to meet the challenges of the sport. Coach Bravin and Assistant Coach Cavannaugh quickly molded this SPIRITED team into an elite squad of running machines, with runners setting personal bests as early as the second race. Outstanding performances culminated in a very important and HARD-FOUGHT not-last position by the Varsity Boys at districts. Juniors Jimmy Brock and Colleen Winzeler placed first and fourteenth at state, with Colleen also winning the AWARD for loudest Mustang Harrier ever. This fairly young team (only 5 wonderful seniors) is itching for next year in order to prove their mettle again and secure another STATE VICTORY for Mason Cross Country! Watch out for the Deer!, She's not here, Yo!, Mad props to my man the Pimp, and Keep off the Hay!

SCOPE THE COURSE

The golf team started out with a lot of promise, an absolute DEMOLISHING of Manassas Park and Strasburg by an outstanding 25 shots. Unfortunately, it was a ROLLERCOASTER from there, with three straight losses by a combined 9 shots. Team STANDOUTS included Freshman Ryan Engle, who finished with an AMAZING 83 at regionals, two shots away from states. Junior G. Robert Penland, who shot a team low of 88 at districts followed by ANOTHER 88 at regionals. Although they will miss Ben Grusin's BOOMING drives, (even those two that went out of bounds against Strasburg), David Frost's UNIQUE swing, and Adam Suleski's driving range antics, the future looks bright. Five out of the EIGHT RETURNING GOLFERS are underclassmen, led by Ryan Engle and Gordon Daisley. The entire team looks POISED at making the regional tournament next year, and maybe even states. Thank you to Hidden Creek Country Club, our HOME COURSE, and to the FCPA for sponsoring the 4 team members in the local BIE tournament.

The 1999-2000 boys varsity basketball team struggled its way through a difficult season in the newly strengthened Bull Run District. Facing new foes such as Clarke County and Strasburg, the boys played with determination and narrowly missed winning several games. The team was led by experience in the form of Seniors Michael Degnan, Ryan Stoner, Ethan Crouch (who's season ended early after an ankle injury), and Tim Gardina and ended up losing a close one to Rappahannock in the opening round of the Bull Run District Tournament. Sophomores Kenny Wilson and Darryl Mayberry as well as Juniors Jimmy Brock, Matt McFarland, and Nathan Hamme rounded out the team. SHOW NO MERCY

*H*ard work builds success. This year's team of wrestlers, most of them underclassmen, proved themselves worthy time after time and proved that all the running, conditioning, pain and sweating really pays off. At the district tournament, the Mustangs faced an expanded Bull Run district that contained both last year's state champs (Brentsville) and perennial powers Strasburg and Manassas Park. Despite these challenges, the team managed to send three wrestlers to the regional tournament: Joey Cohe (140), John Henry Pitas (125), Vlad Roman (152), and Senior Captain Peter Sambaiew (215) who qualified despite a shoulder injury. Robert Goff, fourth year wrestler and captain, failed to qualify for the regional tournament after injuring his knee less than a week before, but he continued to provide amazing leadership. TEAMWORK. The Mason ladies huddle and discuss their plan of attack before that tedious third game.

The Mustang Volleyball team had one heck of a season this year. As one of their many accomplishments, the girls tied the Mason record for wins in a season with ten. The combination of aggressive defense and powerful offense allowed them to reach their full potential as a team. The Lady Mustangs' determination, perserverance, and overall love of the game offered them the chance to compete on the regional level, where they faced 1998-1999 State Champions Wilson Memorial, losing in an intense three game heartbreaker. "We gave it all that we had and are very proud of our accomplishments as a team" said Alexis Koutoulakos. In addition to team achievements, three Mustangs were named to All-District teams; Seniors Amy Hobbie and Lauren Szymanski to the second team, and Junior Alexis Koutouloakos to the First Team. The seniors will be greatly missed, and the girls are looking forward to a rebuilding season next year.

Senior Captains Sally and Meg lead this year's squad with sweetness, authority, and downright intimidation. Sally, a fifth-year veteran of Mason cheerleading, looked to finish her career off with a strong season, and swas not disappointed as she was named to both the district and region first teams. Meg, also a five-year veteran, led with grace and was named to the All-District second team. These two were an invaluable asset and will be greatly missed.

The varsity cheerleaders of 1999-2000 finally gained some respect for their sport. The girls began work on their competition routine in October and were extremely prepared when they hosted the Bull Run District Competition in the Pit. The girls ended winning, beating last year's state champs (Strasburg) and the rest of their Bull Run rivals. In addition, the girls placed five people on All-District teams, including four on the first team. This was definitely a year to remember.

HOME SWEET HOME

The baseball team, as usual, sported their good looks and TALENT last spring, the latter paying off en route to a DISTRICT CHAMPIONSHIP and later a trip to the regional tournament. Great leadership was displayed by First Team ALL-DISTRICT honorees Brad Guckenberger, Daniel Hardman, and Robbie Andrews, who was also named District Co-player of the year. Other All-District HONORS were given to Joe McCabe, Nick Thomas, Greg Stovall, and Brad Allan. Things picked up midseason for the Mustangs, starting with an 11-1 TROUNCING of a weak Brentsville team in Nokesville. Other memories include giving grief to Coach Amerine, the HIT-A-THON that never happened, our "talks" with Cody on the bus, singing "Runaway," Guckenberger being huge, and CRANKING Mike Reagan to finish 5-1 in the district overall. This year's forecast: With talent, LEADERSHIP, and ol' Coach Horn returning the baseball team will once again shock many. GIRLS' BEST FRIEND

This year's varsity softball team had an INCREDIBLE year. With great leadership from Captains Erin Ballard and Summer Harrington, the Mustangs managed to finish the season with a record of 8-11, the best since 1992. The greatest ACCOMPLISHMENT of the year for the girls was their victory over Brentsville at home by a score of 6-5. The year ended with five players batting over .500,as well as several ALL-DISTRICT HONORS. First team nhonors were long overdue for Erin Ballard and Anna Larson, third base and first base, respectively. The team made it through a difficult schedule against SUPERPOWER Manassas Park and former state champs Brentsville and ended up in THIRD PLACE overall in the district. Though the team lost four seniors last year (three starters) they are planning on a WINNING SEASON this year with the help of new talent.

They run fast, they jump high, and they throw far, but if one term had to describe this team, it would be hard-working. Through sleet and slush, sweltering heat, throbbing shinsplints, and weeds in the track, these Masonites persevered, and it paid off. The product of five months of training was an awe-inspiring girls relay team, incredible victories for Mason speed-demon Colleen Winzeler, several state qualifiers, and even more regional qualifiers. The team was dominated by Sophomores who are ready to step up to the challenge of leadership this coming season, and the otherwise young and developing team is sure to impress this season once the weeds are pulled up and the new track is put down. These amazing Masonites leave the competition coughing in their dust, so don't blink when they fly by in what is sure to be their greatest and most improved season yet.

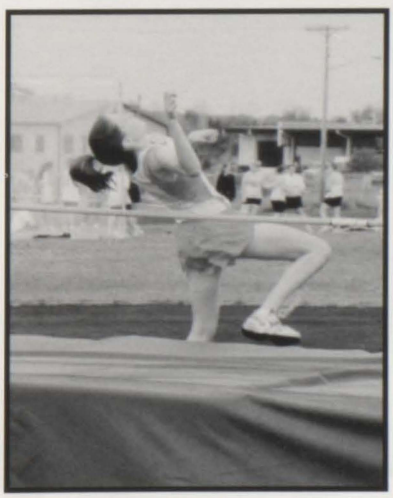
Shot Put

Word 4 Word

	Girls	Guys
What's your most embarassing moment?	When Colleen ran around giving everyone wedgies and broke the drawstring on my pants.	When I slipped in the middle of throwing the shot and fell on my face.
Which body part do you hurt the most?	Shinsplints, because our track is a piece of crap.	My wrists (not quite what you expected...)
What's your favorite gatorade flavor?	Water	Lemon-Lime. I'm a classic type of guy

PUSH-OFF. Mason Harriers Seth Johnston (senior), Joe McQuail (junior), and Ben Cox (senior), focus hard on the coming race while trying not to false start (like Mr. Over-eager from Clarke County, middle...)

TOSS. Freshman Rich Heupel makes the shot put look like a well-coreographed dance as he propels his load forward.



HEIGHT. Sophomore Amy Perlman (premiere Mason jumper) pushes off and looks relaxed as she easily clears this bar.

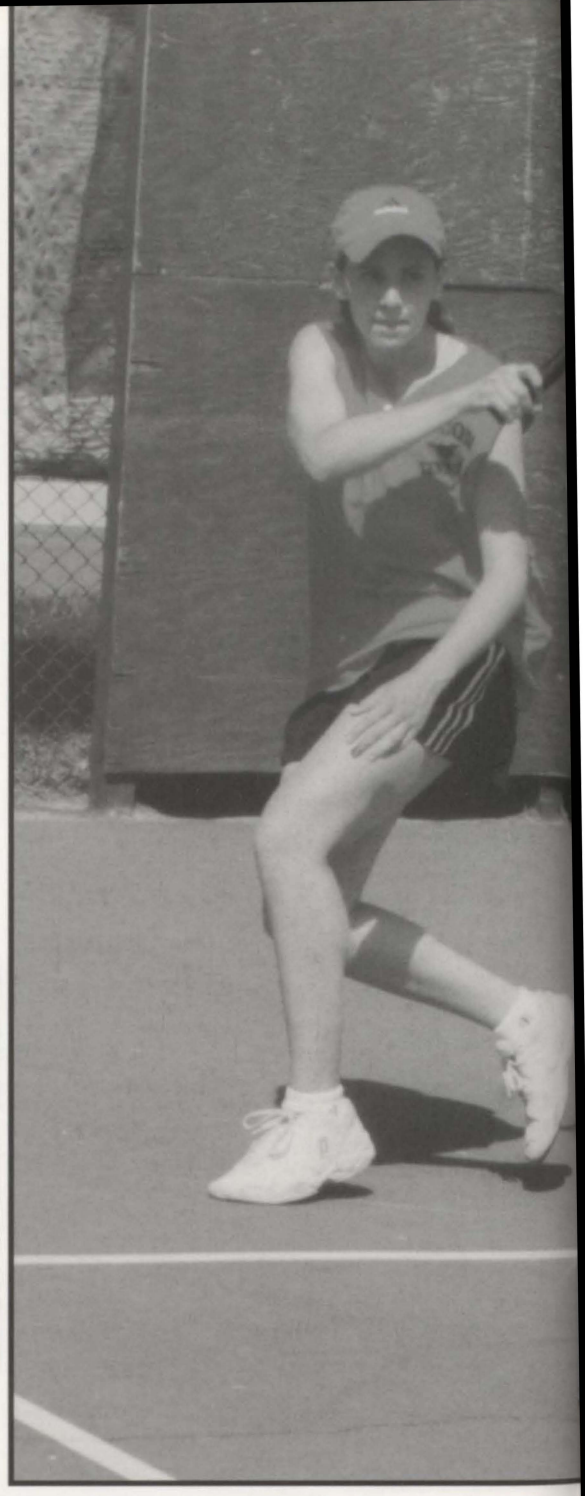
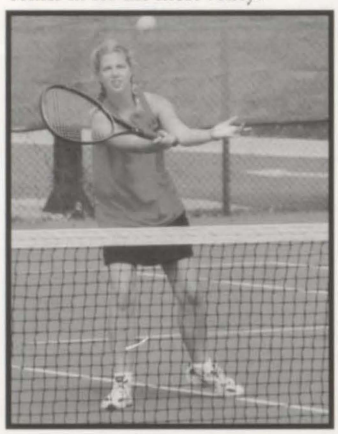
GRACE. Junior Anne Petraeus slaps a hard-hit forehand.

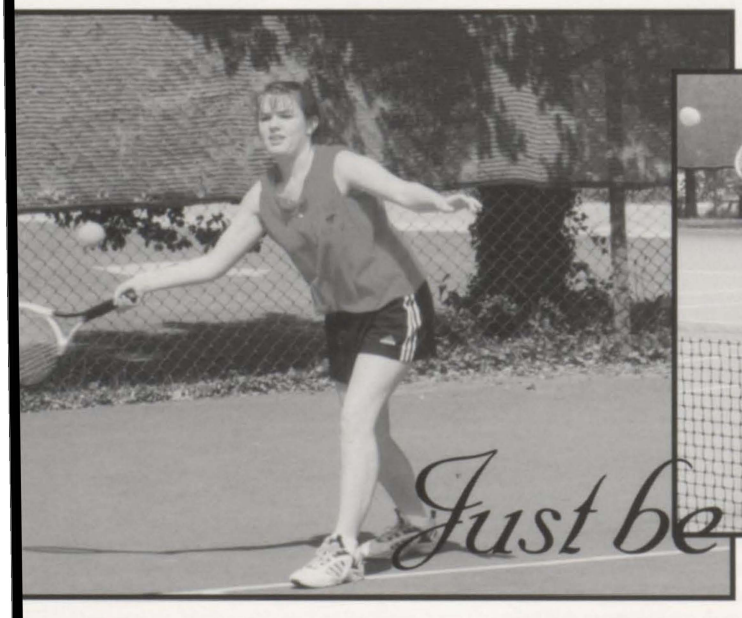


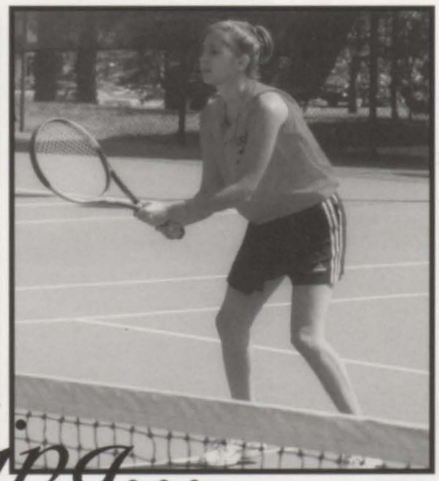
SMASH. Junior Lauren Szymanski returns a serve and looks good doing it.

This year's girls tennis team was very young, after having lost only one senior last year (though a very important one.) The girls were led by veterans Dinah Lord and Torrey Templer, and lost a thriller to perennial power Central for the region. After having lost at their first match with Central, the girls played them well, and the match came down to the final two doubles matches(fought by Amanda Henneberg and Amy Hobbie; Dinah Lord and Elisa Marks.) The girls look to avenge their loss this year with a winning season.

VERSATILE. Senior Andrea Vessey comes in for the short volley.



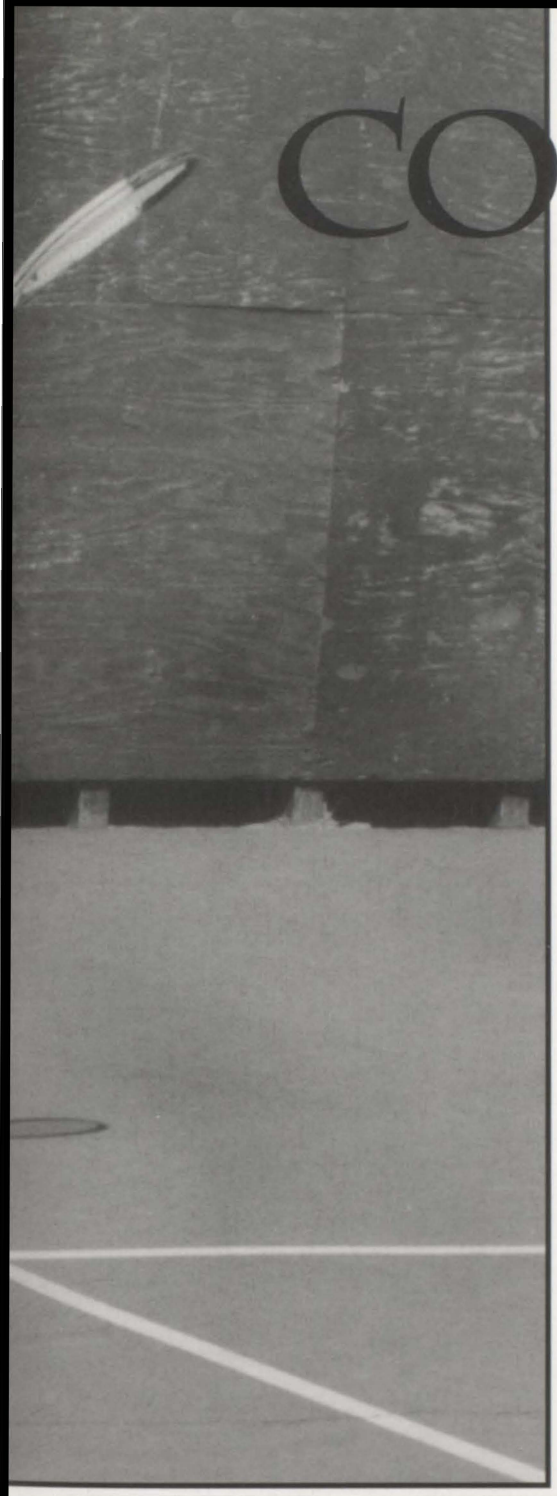




REACH. Junior Melissa Hipolit stretches to return this shot. INSIDE. Hey Liz, stop hittin' yourself. POISED. Junior Elisa Marks stands at the ready.

Just be Smashing...

COURT ORDER



Word 4 Word

	Girls	Guys
Who grunts louder, girls or guys?	Girls! (Elisa could take any guy)	Girls, we only grunt when we're messing around
Why do people watch tennis?	They don't.	Short skirts, naturally.
Net or baseplay?	Net. You can ram it down someone's throat.	Net. You can punish your opponent

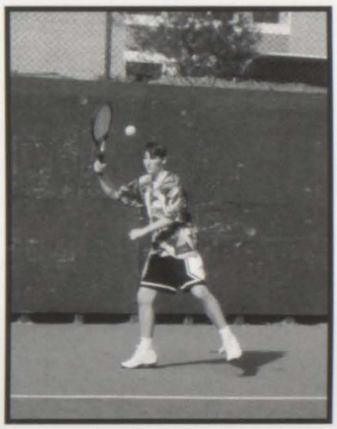
HANG-TIME. Sophomore Gabe Twose lunges to send the ball flying back to his opponent.

HEIGHT. Sophomore Jimmy Brock is great at...well...he can jump really high.

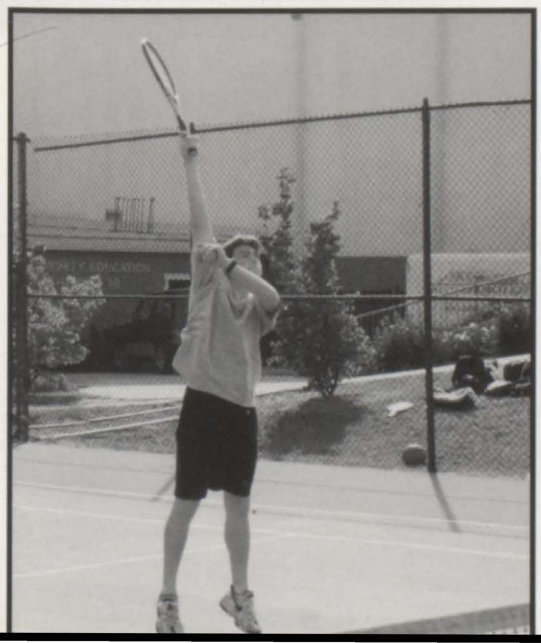
The boys tennis team had a surprisingly successful season considering they had lost their entire top 6 and it was their first year under coach Dave Garrison. They finished with an 8-4 record and as regional runner-ups, with Brad Mowbray qualifying for the regional singles tournament and Gabe Twose and David Lim falling in the regional final. The've lost only 1 senior from the team and are confident of continuing the Mason tennis revival next year.

-Gabe Twose

OVERHAND. Freshman Sasha Eric coils to smash this shot.



BASELINE. Junior Dinah Lord follows through on this fabulous alley shot.



CONSERVE. Junior Ben Dworken jumps to return this smash, keeping his two balls handy (in case of further need...)

HURL. Junior Beau Fay throws the discus and tries to keep his balance at a 60 degree angle. We're sure he eventually succumbed to gravity.

SQUIRT. Senior Joe McCabe turns sideways and tries to barehand the ball while making a monkey face.

INJURIES. Junior Peter Corbino strips down to have his knee tape and is obviously not embarassed to be half-naked in front of the camera.

Paparazzi strikes again

GOOFING OFF. The Seniors and a few other members of the Cross Country Team(including Jimmy Brock, foreground, looking rather bewildered,)take advantage of one of their better endorphin rushes.

FULL TWIST. Freshman Kristin Janski is thrown in the air and does a "full." Unfortunately the cameraman couldn't get a better picture than this one of her butt.

DANCER. Junior Alexis Koutoulakos does "the swim" (actually she just spiked the ball, but we can pretend.)

BETWEEN THE LINES

*D*ue to a lack of pictures and information (due to the departure of Coach Byron Wood) the yearbook was not able to create a Boys' Soccer page. We apologize for the inconvenience, and promise that next year's page will be the best in the section. In addition, due to the change in seasons for girls' soccer, the yearbook was also unable to take pictures and/or report their information for the season. We apologize for this as well, and we hope the girls understand that nothing could be done, and everything will return to normal for next year's yearbook. And so, this page is devoted to simple sports candids, so you can make yourself feel better by laughing at other people's mishaps. Once again, our deepest apologies.

SNAG. Senior Ethan Crouch and Sophomore Alex Miller get caught in the sign. You're supposed to break through it, guys.

COLLISION. There is obviously a bit of confusion between Sally Prendergast and Laura Blodgett as to who's ball that was.

STAMPEDE. The entire girls X-country team takes off of the starting line on one of those ominous, cloudy days at Rappahannock. We have one question though... where are all of the opponents?

AMBIDEXTROUS. Senior Robin Wilson dribbles around her two Brentsville opponents, leaving them wondering where she went in such a hurry. She was probably at the other end of the court by the time they figured it out.

Just be awar...

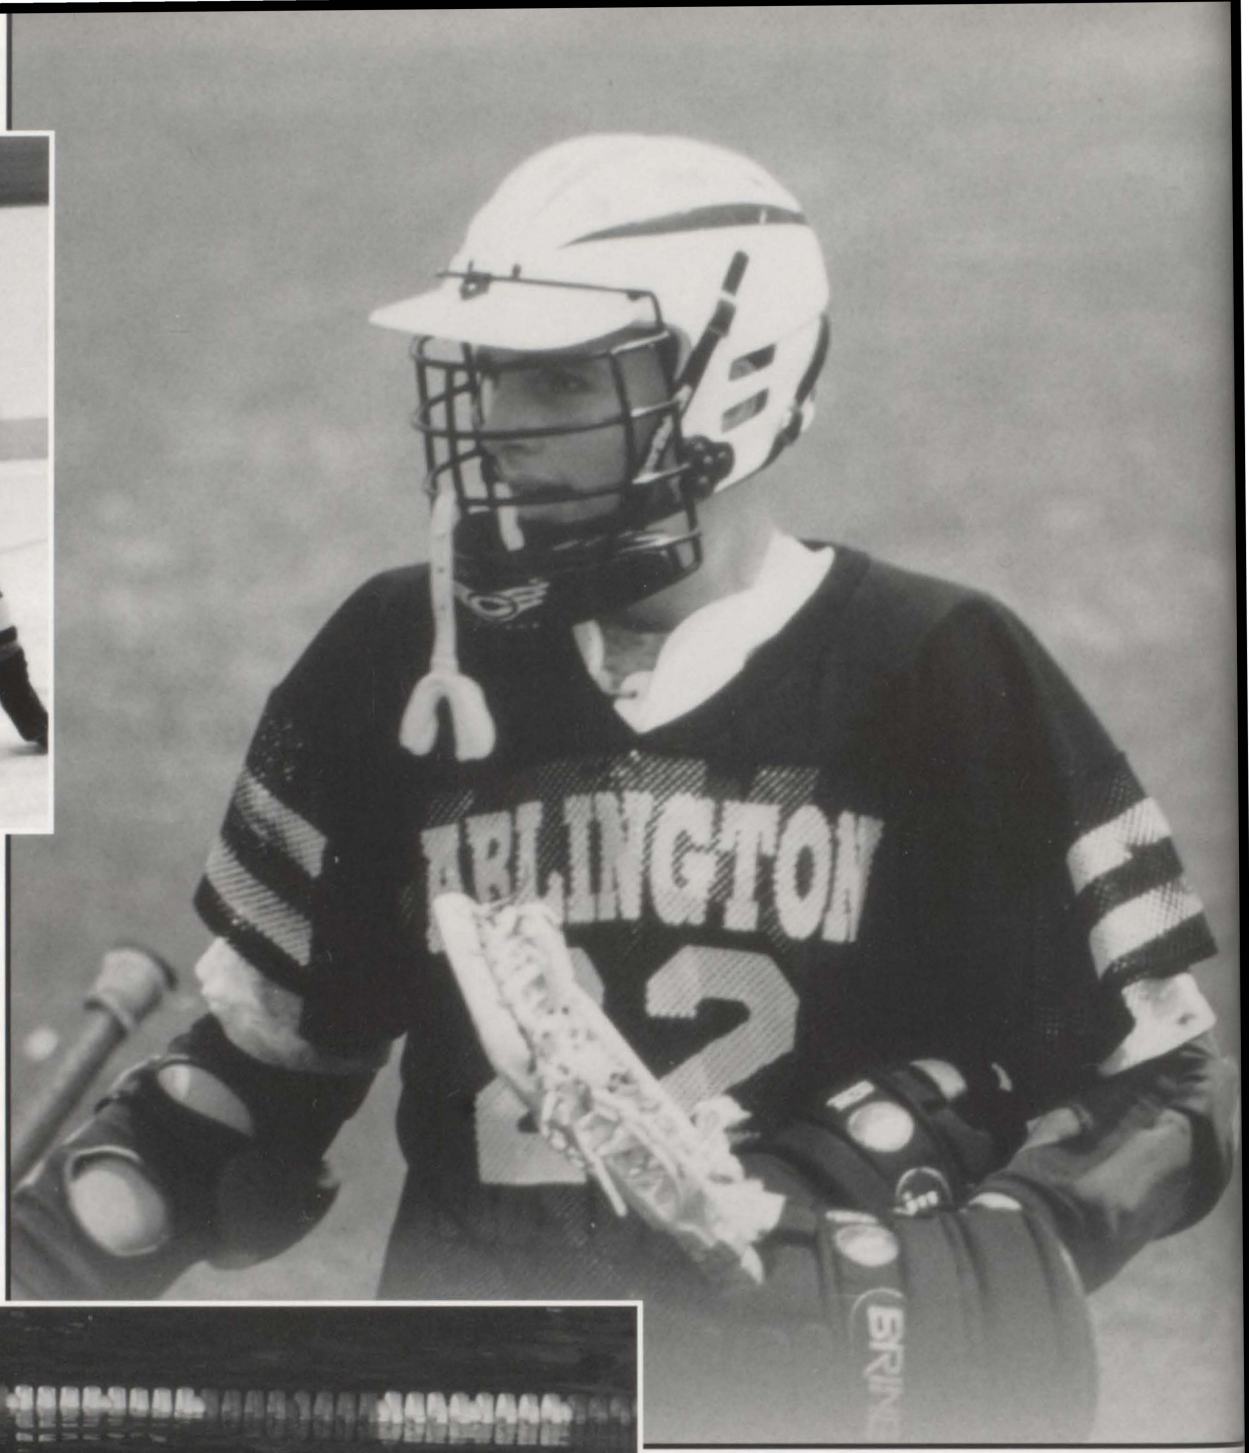
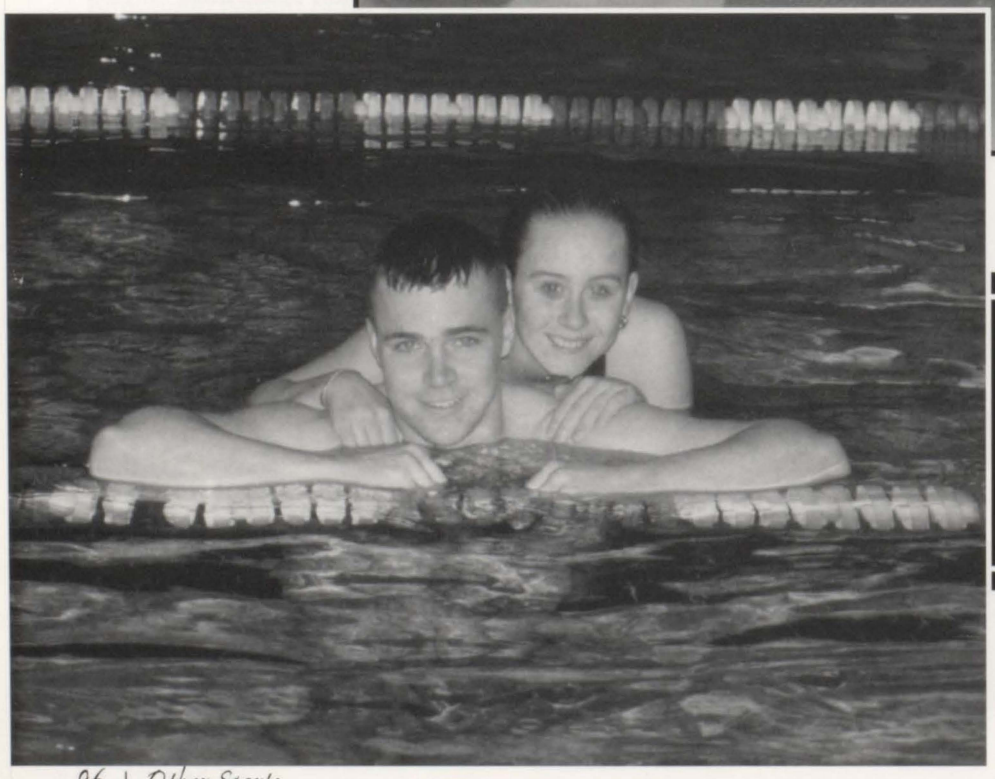
WHOOP-A. Sophomore Brian Coleman continues in the family tradition and dominates on the ice.



BRUTALITY. Junior David Lowe couldn't be a Lacrosse stud at Mason, so he moved on to wooing the Arlington girls with his moves and dashing good looks.



MAINTENANCE. Juniors Erica Singleton and Robin Miller both swim year-round and are obviously in good shape because of it.

Personal Expressions:

This year the yearbook noticed that there are many great athletes outside of the inadequate amount of sports offered here at Mason. We decided that they must be at an awesome level to be able to compete outside of the school and in various select leagues, so we

SECOND HOME

For those of you who don't think Mason sports are good enough...

PAIN. Senior Daniel Coleman decided that none of the sports at Mason were violent enough for him and decided to switch to a "full-contact" sport. We're glad you haven't lost any teeth yet, Daniel.

GRACE. Junior Ballerina Sylvie Steinberg manages to looks gorgeous even though she's really thinking, 'Good Lord my toes hurt!'

decided they needed a page. Though we were not able to photograph all of these endeavors, they include hockey, lacrosse, ballet and other forms of dance, martial arts, swimming, diving, horseback riding, and figure skating. We decided that inspiration must be a huge part of this endless process (some swimmers practice every morning at 4:30 AM!) and so we asked dancer Sylvie Steinberg why she has done ballet nearly all her life. Her response? "Dance is fun."

To thine own self be true...

People. The section where everyone is included. This section exemplifies the way in which the classes, with their own unique spirit and personality, come together to make a whole. Whether you're into watercolor, or football, or horseback riding, this is the place where everyone is equal. Everyone's picture is the same tiny size (yearbook apologizes but their are five hundred and twenty-five of you guys) and just as bad as the rest of them. This is the section no one reads, no one cares about; the one everyone skims through to get to the good stuff. Yearbook knows this, and that's why this year's people section is here in the back of the book, so as not to bore you before you get to everytyhing important. We hope by now you've gotten a good impression of the year, so if we screw up too badly here, we've got insurance. We suggest you look for your picture, make sure it's there, get over it, and move on.

Just be yourself...

People

Just be...A Senior

What thoughts come to mind when thinking of the class of 2000? It was the best of times; it was the worst of times. The Class of 2000 is a diverse, dedicated, motivated, ambitious, energetic, determined and yes, competitive group. From the 53 of us who can recall naptimes at Mt. Daniel, to the 86 who have joined the party along the way, we have all grown together. We have progressed from alphabets to term papers and have evolved into people who are well prepared to meet any challenge. Through our individuality we have so much to offer to each other and to the world. We have shown that people of different cultures and backgrounds can, and do, exist together in harmony. We all have our special memories. Celebrating the decade we were born in with the festive 80's dance, we glamorized the millennium celebration with a homecoming for the ages. Having developed over the past few years, our school spirit was better than it's ever been, as demonstrated by winning Spirit Week. We always strove for excellence and we will not settle for anything less. We are the most bombastic, flamboyant class of the millennium, a class that lives everyday to the fullest and gets the most out of life.

THIS IS THE CLASS OF 2000. THEY SAVED US FOR LAST...

Senior Racheal Gee helps out during hall decorating, which by the way juniors, we dominated.

Even in the freezing cold, Erin Adkins and David Leonard stoically brave the harshest conditions for our boys on the field.

SENIORS

Even in the freezing weather at this year's homecoming game, these four senior girls managed to keep up with the beat.

Senior girls get pumped before the powder-puff game. Too bad we didn't look as happy as this after the game.

Chanting, screaming, and hollering, these two exemplify the true meaning of Class spirit. Greg Stovall's jaunty looks and demeanor are both creative and amusing, on and off the field. Sally Prendergast's curious smiles and enchanting poses when she cheers "GO MASON!" are enough to rouse any crowd. Together these two are a spirited blizzard over a steamy volcano; they bring out in all of us our true colors of Mason Red & White.

They're just like the rest of us and it's reflected in their actions in and about school. We're all so impressed with them and yet they don't allow this to overcome who they are and what they stand for.

Winking, smiling, hugging, and kissing, Brad Frost and Krista Locklar have earned their status as Sweet Talkers. They have worked very hard during their time at Mason to earn this respect and appreciate it greatly. Just look at them cuddle. They flirt and tease, but they aim to please. Krista's warm and vivacious treatment of Senior boys has kept them swooning over her for four years. Brad will charm and melt you like a hot knife through butter. Despite all this we do acknowledge their considerable efforts to please all the boys and girls of high school. We know they won't stop, and truly we don't want them to.

Dave Frost and Inara Samedova showed precisely how the Senior Class this year danced their way into the Millenium. Whether Dave's "Clearing his throat," at an all school assembly or Inara's winning T-shirts off of Mr. Horn, these two get everyone in the mood... on the dance floor that is. They shake their hips and move to the groove and of course they'll bust a move. Simply put, they can dance. We've all seen it and sometimes we even try to emulate their style. In the future we fully expect that their stepping ways will continue to bring them fame and pleasure for all around.

Kate Jackson and Ben Dworken have lit up our hallways here at Mason with their insatiable grins. If we were lucky enough to come across these two when things seemed down and the going got tough, we couldn't help but return the grin that glowed from ear to ear across their faces. We have found that in their presence everyone is smiling and this is because they share their"Gorgeous Grins"; inevitably spreading them to everybody they come into contact with. We will miss this but won't ever forget how their smiles brightened our days, cured our sorrows, and warmed our hearts.

If you knew these two seniors then you would understand why they swept the vote of friendliest. You'll never see Jenny Powell or Jordan Wilson doing any harm to others, getting in any sort of trouble, or without a smile to greet you with a big hello. These two can make anyone's day seem brighter, and have something uniquely special about them. They are truly two wonderful people.

MOST UNIQUE

Beth Gardner and Ardi Kuhn are two of the most genuine, creative, and unconventional members of our class. They aren't afraid to speak their opinions and have extreme self confidence in themselvs. They are a delight to have in class. They are both now involved in IB art classes, where they get in express indivuality the most. Whether they are expressing themselves by dyeing their hair a different color every week, or the way they dress, they are two very unique students.

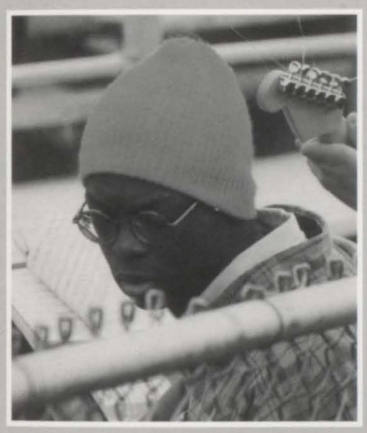
Just be dancing...



Bam! We'll take your eye out

However long and arduous all of this seemed at times the senior class wishes to extend a very long and sincere thank you to everyone that made it fun, interesting, challenging, and just plain crazy. For these reasons we now know that you did the best you could for us. We may only realize it in passing or upon reflection, but we still want to thank you in advance. You pushed and guided us; provided encouragement and perhaps a chuckle, but through all the hard work, late nights, excuses, and blunders, you promised, and sincerely so, that if we tried our best it didn't matter if it was satisfactory to the standard, but that it was satisfactory for each of us individually.

-Tracy Brown even surprises himself as the camera flashes.

Welcome to the Wild Wild West y'all. Two thousand and One, the class of thrills, spills, and chills can be found at any time wreaking havoc down the many halls of George Mason. This group of wet, wild, and crazy kidz is as diverse as their taste in music. Anything from hip hop to classic rock can be heard vibrating the ears of the 149 students in the class (the largest Mason has ever seen.) Like our class number we live big and take every moment to the fullest. As the Backstreet Boys say, we're "larger than life" and full of school spirit. Not to rehash things, but if we could please remember spirit week...shouldn't we have won? I think both Beau and Mr. Hanger would say, "Yeah!!" Of course, we can't forget powder puff where our girls really played like champions, champions. But to put that all aside, we're ready to take our throne at the head of the school, and become what we've waited so (im)patiently for, SENIORS. 2001 y'all, and you know this, man! -D. gether otherwise there is going to be some serious beating next year." ~ Class of 2001

Superiority

Junior year is characterized by lots of hard work, the beginning of the college process, and the insatiable urge to beat the seniors at anything and everything. This year's class has been watched ever since freshmen year when their hall decorating got noticed and beat the sophomores. Then, during their sophomore year, they very nearly overtook the junior class in spirit week, and won an unprecedented number of pep rally events for a tenth grade class. The entire class talked of this being the year, the year the junior class would beat the seniors. Everyone knew it, even the administration. The school buzzed with competition and the atmosphere was tense throughout spirit week. Though the junior class didn't come back with the victory, it was obvious who was superior in every way. The class managed to join together in every way and become unified in their struggle to beat the crap out of the seniors. Now the wait is to see how they will rule the school as seniors, being the most spirited, athletically, and academically spirited class in this millenium. Let's start the thousand years off right...

Sarah Michalski sneaks outside for lunch and is forced to put on her shades because of the blinding sunlight. One of the new privileges of the juniors was being able to eat wherever they want (well, almost anywhere...)

Once again, another junior that's been "blinded by the light." Elizabeth Carter tries to see her food and despite her sunglasses, is temporarily blind.

NEXT STOP : Senior Year

Take everything you learned this year and capitalize. Be the best. Remember: If you can't win, play dirty..

All right, it's time to go and be what we've all looked forward to for years. Senior year will be here soon, and the reign of 2001 will begin. Make it what you will, but make it good. Show them that the spirit doesn't stop, and leave a legacy. Be unbeatable. Be obnoxious (but not too obnoxious.) Claim your territory, and be firm. Be the admissions officer's dream. Be a leader. Find the college of your dreams and get in. Be all-region in basketball/softball/football. Change your outlook and be open-minded. Beat up on Freshmen. Just be....a senior!

Powder Puff '01

Well, there's not much to say about this one. This picture shows one of the many pep talks which proved unnecessary since the girls were mean and ready to kill. They wore red shirts turned inside out and painted with names such as "Bloody Mary," "Gould-en Arm," and "Eliza Bean" and sported red face paint and lipstick. The girls ruled the night even though it was a mud bowl and visibility was low. And...well...everyone knows who won.

Junior Pirates

The junior class had a great showing on pirate day, which they of course won. Here the group poses during lunch. If you're wondering, Amanda is perched on Robin's shoulder because she is his parrot. Another note: Yes, swords of any kind are not allowed in school, but we got away with it that time.

Only two more years....Oh God! Two more years!

Flower Girl Christina Christianson makes a statement, wearing flowers in her hair.

When you walk into school as a sophomore, you feel different. Something has changed. You've been through the year of hell as freshmen where everyone takes all their anger out on you, and you've become ...well...older. You're taking harder classes, you're making friends with the upperclassmen, and you finally get your chance to pick on the freshmen. Next step: unite and try to beat the seniors next year. Good Luck.

The in-between year. Get the fun in while you can. Be carefree and neglect your work.

Just be Patient

*T*his is the year of thinking you should get more than you actually do. You're ready to battle with the seniors and juniors but find yourselves still held down by those freshmen...which you, of course, never were. You're ready to take on a little more schoolwork, but then you get hit from every side by questions like, "So...what IB classes are you planning on taking next year?" You're at that annoying age where you could make varsity sports, and then, you could be stuck having to teach all of those new guys how to play on JV. It's still an "upset" when you win a pep rally event, you have almost no big school events to plan (excuse me, sorry, the snow ball...), and you still get no respect. Take it as it is, since you know that next year everything is a competition. Take some time and get to know everyone, because that's your best chance for survival...

*P*robably the hardest thing about sophomore year is the struggle for class unity. I'm sure this has happened to some of you: you show up at an event, let's say...oh...hall decorating for instance. You're there right on time and ready to go while it seems that everyone else has better things to do. Think no one cares? It'll go away. This year is the year when you'll break the barriers and stop seeing people like you did in middle school, (for what they wore, how they looked, etc., and don't try to deny that you did it, because everyone went through that stage.) You'll realize when you arrive next year at the homecoming pep rally and you're surrounded by screaming members of your grade, standing by someone you think you might've had ninth grade math with but aren't sure....that all of them are in the same boat as you, and sophomore year is where it starts...

United we stand

Looking forward to looking back...

Katie Velez and Adrienne Thompson look up at the photographer in disgust while he (unknown) tries to get a good shot of their legs.

Kevin Dorsey dons his headphones to try to block out the noise of the construction on what were once Mason's fields, as well as Mr. Wilkie's lecture.

Jean-Marie Thomas and Meagan Ireland look up at Mr. Applegate and think, "You're kidding, right? There's no way the cat is that fat."

Katie Velez, Dena Adriance and Maive McQuail do something, and we have no idea what it is, but they seem to be enjoying themselves.

Melissa Rose McCully looks forlorn as she completely gives up on her physics test. Christina Christianson, however, is hard at work and probably getting the right answer.

The year in review...closing remarks...wrapping it up

Joey Cohe

Just be tolerant...

Freshmen 2003

Since it's their first year, it just has to be a little bit scary. After escaping the strict discipline of "the dictator" aka "the commander", they found that not only could they wear tankops, but could also chew gum and just be outright insolent. So, with these new powers, they figured, had to come a little bit of responsibility. But then they arrived in class and realized that no-it wouldn't be too hard, and they'd have a really fulfilling year.

Near Left: Nikhil Mehra (we're convinced it's him) rechecks his answers on a test for Mr. Wilkie.

This group of freshmen scream for their boys despite the cold weather and the fact that most of them are probably on the sidelines (give 'em a couple of years...)

Bigger Hallways ...

That always have to be completely filled, right guys? We're glad you all can get so smashed together, maybe that's a good sign! This year is the best; take time to get to know everyone, because it's the only time that all of the upperclassmen will seem "big" and "intriguing" (because one day that'll be you and you'll be making fun of freshmen...). Look outside of your own little world...this school's a great melting pot.

Learning the ropes...

Poor Freshmen. Sorry about all the trash talk. But, you guys seemed to take it well, and almost beat the sophomores in spirit week! (Though that didn't seem like too much of a challenge, come on 2002!) Keep going and you'll get some class unity, and maybe you'll turn out just like the class of 2001...er.....2000 one day. And as for school, get as much of it as you can, it'll never be that easy again...

Nine letters, two words... means "place of detention"

Coach/staff member Byron Wood and Junior Nathan Hamme struggle to finish a killer crossword in so-called "study hall". The clue was "segment of a calyx," with six letters. Good luck guys.

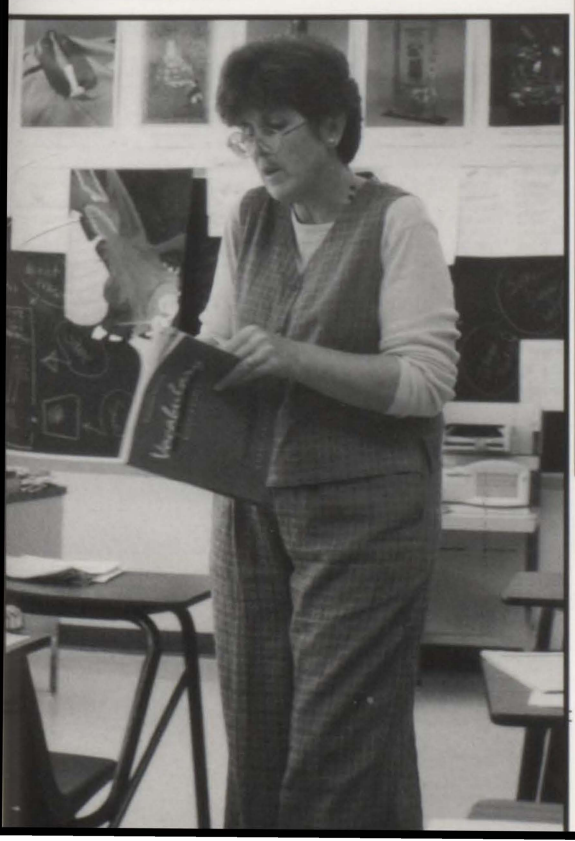
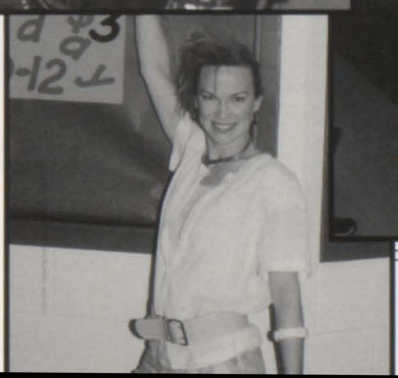
Left: Here we can see Mrs. Webster, who played several instruments during the homecoming game just so we could have a full band.
Below: Mr. Guy struts down the hall with purpose. He's obviously come up with another brilliant idea and can't wait to share it with the SCA.

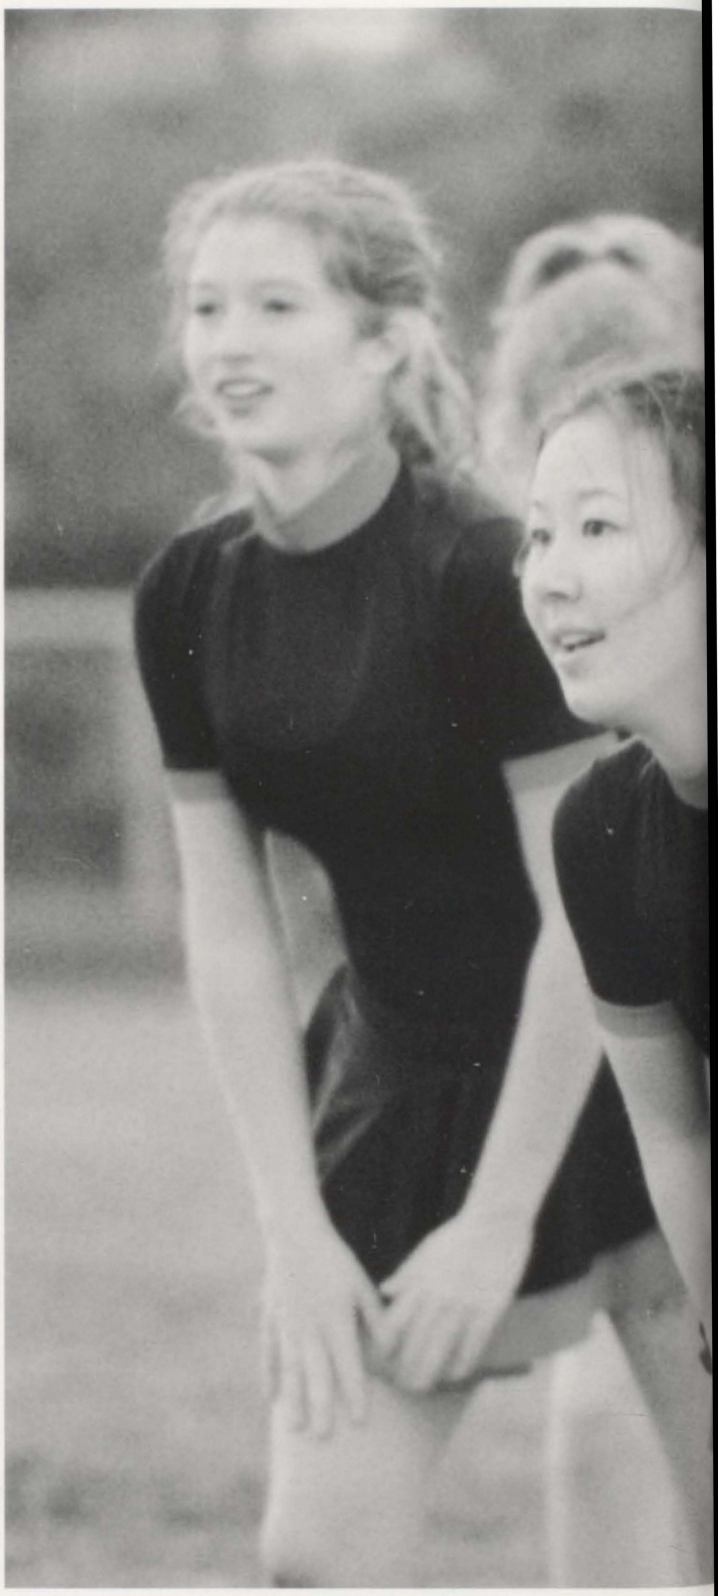


Left: Well, here's a surprise: Mrs. Dean with a vocabulary book.
Right: Mrs. Biggers was the most happenin' chick at the eighties dance by far.



...So proud thy service

George Mason's club scene this year gained new additions, lost old ones, and remained very diverse. With the addition of clubs such as CADRE and the Gay-Straight Alliance, Mason students proved that they're open-minded and involved. Traditional clubs such as Key Club, Tempo, and Opus Zero continued to grace us with beautiful music, representation of our students' more sophisticated work, as well as proof that we're involved outside of the school as well as in. Other new ideas such as the Poetry Club and the Math Club filled out the list of opportunities to get involved. The Student Council once again put on several great events (including homecoming week and rebound week) and proved themselves good leaders and adept planners. Membership in clubs this year was phenomenal, with many sophomores and freshman (with a little prodding) showing up to help out. The clubs this year showed the diversity of interests among students and effectively allowed them to go beyond english, history, and chemistry.



Just be involved...

Lend us your ears...

This section is the one that just about everyone cries at. The yearbook staff had nothing (well, very little) to do with the design of these pages, so when you read them, all the credit should go to all the parents in shock that their children are leaving next year. And seniors, we know you want to, so flip through it quickly right now until you find yours and read it first. Congratulations, Class of 2000, this is your section, and from the yearbook staff, we wish you all good luck in thr future, so go out and make us proud. Oh, and we had fun looking at all of your naked baby pictures!

Just be nostalgic...

"The dreamers are the saviors of the world. He who Cherishes a beautiful Vision, a lofty Ideal in his Heart, will one day realize it. Cherish your Vision; Cherish your Ideal. You will become as great as your Aspiration." From James Allen's As a Man Thinketh.

With much love and pride, Your Family

To Brad and Dave

I have watched and helped you grow

From infants, to boys, to men.

And you have watched and helped me understand

How to see the important things there are to see.

You are beginning to realize and appreciate the charisma and power you hold.

Always use it wisely and know that you will succeed in whatever path you choose to take.

From sand box to reciprocity, and with liberal poetic license,

You have given my heart a change of mood

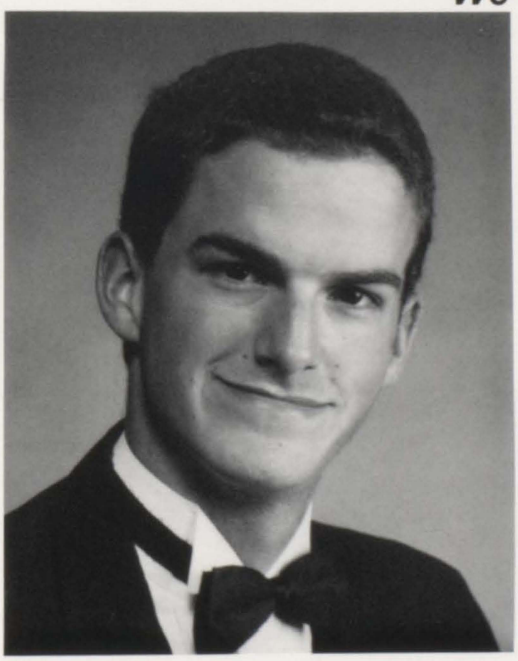
And always saved whatever part of a day I had rued.

The world is your stage – take it by storm!

You are gifted, sensitive, generous, brilliant, and loving –

You are an invincible force...and

We will always be proud of you!



With All Our Love,

Laura Blodgett and Mary Prendergast, Editors-in-Chief

Other VIPs:

Amy Perlman, Academics Editor and doer of the jobs that no one else wanted to do, with a smile on her face.

Mr. D. Applegate, Our Sponsor who braved divorce several times to stay late at school with us (even though he actually liked it because he got to do physics day and night and rebuild our computers)

Becky Davis, Sports Editor who put up with constant screaming from the powers that be about things that had nothing to do with her.

Folake and Bolaji Ojumu, Dawa Sherpa, Michael Bracken, Sarah Michalski, Shannon Whitney, Brad Frost, Katiuska Arias, David Lowe, Camila Jones, Kate O'Hara, Julia Bradshaw, Amanda Henneberg, James Slaton, Joe Stroup, Derek Orban and several others who donated their time.

This year's yearbook is dedicated to Stucky the bird, who's ill-fated life ended when he got stuck in the window outside of the yearbook room. We couldn't save him, but he is forever in our hearts.

We didn't start the fire, put on the freaking red light, computer crashes, ill-fated games of soda can basketball, Applemix3, the very best, bring on the chinese food, where have all the editors gone? Impromptu second-family dinners, close encounters of the Sinha kind (and the Dw----- kind), Mary's bad jokes, Amy's violent tendencies...and Mary's lunatic ones, D. Apple's incessant ramblings about physics phenomena, bodyslams, late, delirious nights when we're only funny to ourselves, Michael Bracken is money, wicked wicked wild wild, the great color scanning experiment, What in god's name is a postscript error? Why did the printer just barf? Praying to the gods of the yearbook. How did we spend so much money? Selling our bodies as a fundraiser, scaring off all of the underclassmen, yelling at Becky, Sara, Petrea (I'm sorry), Amanda's great act of sweetness (which we will never forget), Mrs. Applegate and the imminent threat of divorce, not to mention the diet of the week, stories from the great past, Steppenwolf, right? "Small talk," Why can't we use the word #$%^&#%^@? STOP LOOKING AT PICTURES IF YOU'RE NOT GOING TO WORK! Sleeze, where you at, I need the help, no posed pictures! The attack of the frightened and confused physics students, the state flower of West Virginia, the only baby picture for which we couldn't find a home or owner, the ill-fated book-wrapping attempts, opens and Mrs. Clark's bio class, zip disks, burping attempts, above and beyond the "what you got away with in class" survey...I'll never use a microscope again...AGH. MP Brack and the delusions of grandeur (I am too the sports editor!), Chicken Caesar salads, the abhorration of microsoft, pot pies, Newspress dependence, rampant plagiarism, exaggeration, type one, two and three errors, Laura's hatred of the new iMac, "This box contains 'shiz'", "crap pictures -- tapioca", Amy's rampant organizing sprees, lots and lots and lots of food and late night binge eating. Probably the best time of our lives and a great personal satisfaction, even if nobody says thank you.

Colophon

The 2000 Mason Yearbook, manufactured by Josten's Publishing Company, Winston-Salem, NC, was supervised by representatives John Bailey and Jenny Caskey, as well as in-plant representative Sandy Moses. The 188-page book was printed on 80 lb. glossy paper and contained 32 pages of color. The endsheets were Natural, and the lithographed cover contained Tan (10%) with overscript in Tan (30%) and Maroon (100%) lettering. Body copy and captions were written in varying sizes of AGaramond, and headlines were in varying sizes of Impact, Charlemagne, Nuptualscript, Sanvito Roman, Poetica Chanceryl, and Trajan.

To develop the concept of "To Be or Not to Be," Laura and Mary created the subheading of "Just be..." for each page. The idea was developed at the 1999 Jostens Yearbook Excellence Seminar and developed throughout the year. The idea was to show the varying things that Mason students are and can become.

The book was Macintosh produced using Pagemaker 6.5, Clarisworks, and Jostens Yeartech software (N0 Microsoft software used) and was submitted on zip disk and cd. Senior and underclass portraits were taken by Segall-Majestic, Baltimore, MD. The book's pressrun was 440, and the book was sold for 45.00 year-round.

All layout and graphic design was completed by Mary Prendergast, Laura Blodgett, and/or Amy Perlman. For questions or commetns write to: George Mason Yearbook, 7124 Leesburg Pike, Falls Church, VA, 22042. Phone: (703)-248-3049.
